FATE OF RELIEF BILL AT STAKE IN UPPER HOUSE

Senate Expected to Act Late Today on $10,000,000 Compromise

NELSON IS KEY MAN

Maple Independent's Vote May Determine Final Vote on Measure

Madison—(AP)—A new $7,000,000 unemployment relief bill, which is the same as that previously passed by the senate except that it meets in part the contentions of Governor LaFollette and halts the operation of the 1931 grade crossing program was introduced today by Senator J. J. Fellenz, Fond du Lac conservative.

Senator Fellenz had reserved the right to introduce the bill by offering it in title only before the deadline was set up against new measures Dec. 15.

It was sent to revision in time to be returned by the afternoon session when the senate is scheduled to act on the administration's compromise bill.

It portends the fight that is to be made by the conservatives on the LaFollette-Beggs compromise.

Madison—(AP)—The administration's $10,000,000 compromise relief bill is scheduled to be acted upon late today in the senate where the breach between Governor LaFollette and the conservatives has been broadened by developments of the last two days.

The conservatives, who with the independents defeated the governor's original relief plan for $17,000,000 have been planning a broadside against the new bill and its controversial proposal of taxing dividends, 1931 net incomes without deduction for capital losses, chain stores and gifts.

Amendments are expected to be offered to adjust the bill, in some measure at least, to the viewpoint taken by the Republican regulars and independents who have twice gone on record for a bill limited to increase in the normal income taxes, spread over two years and with the dividend tax eliminated and the deduction of capital losses allowed.

It was on the latter issue that the governor, in a sharp message last Tuesday, charged the senate majority with an attempt to place the relief burden on general property by failing to provide adequate income taxes In that message also he announced his intention to veto any bill that does not provide what he considered adequate financing.

Reply To Governor

An equally sharp reaction to the governor's message—in the form of a statement by Senator Walter S. Goodland, Racine conservative—was spread upon the senate journal yesterday. It assailed the governor as a dictator intent upon forcing his demands upon the legislature and accused him if misrepresenting the attitude and motives of the conservatives

So in that atmosphere of tense feeling, the Beggs-LaFollette $10,000,000 measure, passed by a 73 to 15 vote in the Progressive assembly where it originated, comes today before the senate.

It was advanced from Friday's calendar on motion of senator J. J. Fellenz, Fond du Lac conservative, and set for a special order of business at 2 30 this afternoon

The conservatives are certain to disapprove the bill in its present form and of the three independents, Senators Ben Gettelman, Milwaukee; J. H Carroll, Glidden, and Philip Nelson, Maple The latter appears to be the key man

Nelson sponsored previous substitutes for the administration program, each of which proposed income tax plans which the governor contended were inadequate and

BANKING BILL TURNED DOWN BY ASSEMBLY

Anti-chain Measure Lacks Four Votes of Two-thirds Majority

Madison—(AP)—The assembly today killed the clearing house and anti-chain bank bill introduced by Assemblyman John Grobschmidt, Milwaukee, on behalf of the interim committee banking.

Defeat of the bill in the lower house, which is controlled by the administration, meant that no anti-chain bank measure will be passed at this session of the legislature. The senate previously killed a duplicate of the Grobschmidt bill.

The Grobschmidt measure got 63 votes but needed 67 under the statute which provides that all banking measures must get a two-thirds majority. The vote was 63 to 24. In the senate the duplicate measure failed to get a two-thirds vote although a majority of senators voted for the bill.

The establishment of 20 to 35 clearing house districts and associations was provided for by the bill. It was proposed exclude chain banks from these associations and no public deposits were to be made in banks other than those which were members of the associations.

Assemblyman Charles Budlong, Marinette, conservative, explained his vote in favor of the bill by saying the conservative Republican platform drawn at the Oshkosh convention was opposed to monopoly control of banking credit. Because he ran on that platform, he was duty bound to vote for the bill, he said.

The Grobschmidt bill curbed chain banking by withdrawing the fiduciary bill before the assembly which abolishes all chain banking outright. This measure is scheduled to come before the lower house Saturday.

250 ISOLATED BY HEAVY SNOWFALL

Plows Start to Rescue of Group Marooned in California Region

Kansas City—(AP)—Activity in a strip of snow covered states extending northeastward from the Texas panhandle and in the mountains of the Pacific coast held the weather interest of the west today.

Snowplows whirling to the rescue of 250 or more persons isolated by heavy drifts in the Mono basin district of California had 20 miles to go.

Workmen hoped to clear the road, blocked since Christmas Eve, before a food shortage develops. Drifts ranged up to 11 feet deep.

Friends searched near Plainville, Kas, for Harold Baumgartner, 22-year-old farmer missing on a hunting trip. The region was swept by a destructive snow storm a few hours after he left home Monday.

Temperatures generally were moderate. Snowplows and wire crews were completing the work of restoring communication and travel to a normal basis.

Partly cloudy weather was forecast in most of the southwest. Snow flurries were expected in Iowa, Nebraska and other states to the north. A heavy snow fell yesterday about Lewistown and Helena, Mont The forecast for the Rocky mountain region generally was fair.

CURFEW BELL IS HELD ANTI-CRIME MEASURE

Oconto—(AP)—The curfew bell has been revived in Oconto in an effort to combat juvenile crime. The hour of 9 o'clock p. m. is struck by the fire bell and children under 15 must leave the streets unless accompanied by adults. The curfew came back after police broke up "the Secret Six," a group of boys accused of breaking into several homes and of writing threatening letters.

KILLS FIVE CHILDREN, THEN COMMITS SUICIDE

Cape Girardeau, Mo.—(AP)—Olive Davenport, 50, killed five of his children by striking them over the head with a hammer in their farm home near Patton, Mo, early today, seriously wounded his wife and another child, and then shot himself to death with a shotgun. Davenport apparently went insane. The tragedy left unharmed only one child in the family of eight.

DALE JACKSON

Miami, Fla.—(AP)— One too many inside loops is blamed for the death of Dale (Red) Jackson, 26, St. Louis flier and co-holder of the unofficial endurance refueling flight record.

He fell 3,000 feet apparently unable to extricate himself from a plane whose wings failed to stand the strain of aerobatics as he stunted above Miami Municipal airport yesterday on the eve of the fourth annual all-American air race.

U. S. Senate Hears Debate On Dry Laws

Washington—(AP)—Prohibition debate between Republican Senators Brookhart of Iowa, and Bingham of Connecticut today engaged senate attention.

Bingham started the row by introducing an amendment to his 4 per cent beer bill restricting the use of the beverage to sales in hotels and restaurants. He mentioned that "The Crusaders" an anti-prohibition organization, favored it.

Brookhart, a militant prohibitionist, complained that the Crusaders "are assuming a Christian title for an un-Christian purpose"

"In addition," shouted the Iowan, "the purpose of these beer bills is to transfer the income taxes from the big taxpayers to the laborers and common people."

"If we could legalize 4 per cent beer," returned Bingham, "we would produce a market for the farmers of the state of the senator from Iowa for 100,000,000 bushels of grain. Moreover, the people who like to drink beer would have no objection to paying a small tax to help meet our tremendous deficit."

"I doubt," replied Brookhart, "if the senator from Connecticut ever saw a farm. If he had he would know that 100,000,000 bushels of grain is an infinitesmal amount of the farmers' output.

"Pierre S. DuPont told a senate committee if we could get beer back it would save $10,000,000 in taxes from his company and transfer them to the common people. Yet Pierre S DuPont runs a dry factory and won't hire a wet to work for him."

Previously, Brookhart claimed before the senate that the prohibition poll taken by Chairman Raskob of the Democratic National committee was a dry victory.

Brookhart said Raskob sent letters to 77,000 contributors to the Democratic campaign fund of 1928 "in promoting some kind of a wet program" but he received replies from only 25,000

SENATE APPROVES QUIZ ON GRADE CROSSINGS

Madison—(AP)— The Roberts resolution relief commission, the industrial and highway commissions before the senate for questioning concerning administration of the 1931 grade crossing elimination projects today had the approval of the senate.

The members of the commission will appear Friday night with the senate sitting as a committee of the whole. The resolution, Senator Glenn Roberts, Madison, said was prompted by the charge of Senator Walter S. Goodland, Racine, that the handling of the grade crossing program almost amounted to a state scandal.

Roberts said the senate and the state were entitled to know the facts in the case and that summoning of the commission members for questioning under oath would bring out the desired information.

DENIES BLAME FOR LOSSES OF BOND HOLDERS

Stimson Says Department Does Not Pass on Intrinsic Values

Washington—(AP)—A formal denial came today from the state department of any responsibility for losses the public might have had in buying foreign bonds.

"No foreign loan has ever been made," it is said, "which purported to have the approval of the American government as to the intrinsic value of the loan."

In its 2,000 word statement which came as a reply to a denunciation by Senator Glass, a Virginia Democrat, the department said that its simple statement of the absence of objection to a loan could not be considered as approval of it.

The statement came while the senate finance committee was hearing read warnings by former Secretary Kellogg of state and by S. Parker Gilbert, agent general of reparations in 1927, suggesting that American bankers be cautious in handling foreign loans.

The department added that the practice of bankers' notifications to the department was first established with the idea "of safeguarding essential American interests that might be affected by the process of foreign investment" and had been maintained as "an informal comparatively light and flexible check against the possibility that contemplated loan issues might run counter to some governmental policy or aim."

Postition Is Known

"At every opportunity the department has made clear to bankers and interested public that this practice of advance notification to the department and the absence of objection and comment by the department must in no way be considered or portrayed as approval of the loan," it said.

In a second formal statement totaling 3,000 words, the department's policy on proposed loans in Germany was outlined.

In these replies it was said the department had been advised that German federal authorities themselves were "not disposed to view with favor the indiscriminate placing of German loans in the American market, particularly when the borrowers are German municipalities and the purposes are not productive"

The letters would also note a warning that "serious complications in connection with interest and amortization payments by German borrowers" might arise in the future. The letter stated that the department did not in any case pass on merits of foreign loans but emphasized "the uncertainties of the situation."

The formula "the department is not interested in the proposed financing" remains the standard practice, the statement said

In the meantime, Representative Knutson, Republican Minnesota, introduced a measure calling for a congressional investigation into a wide variety of stock and security transactions.

Between questioning, the finance committee put into its record a letter from the chemical foundation to members of the committee, charging international bankers had made foreign loans "in direct hostility to" the domestic chemical industry.

The letter said the bankers had been loaning these savings of Americans to the "international chemical cartel, or its constituent companies or allies."

GOVERNOR ATTACKS MILWAUKEE SOLONS

Says Four Senators Are Responsible for Defeat of His Relief Bill

Milwaukee—(AP)—Defeat of his $17,000,000 relief program was attributed to four Milwaukee senators in an address last night by Gov. Philip F. LaFollette, and he called upon his listeners to make the legislators change their position.

Speaking over radio station WISN, Governor LaFollette named the senators as Harry Daggett, Bernhard Gettelman, Irving Mehigan and Oscar Morris.

"If enough of you will build some fire under these senators from this county," he said, "the legislature will move into action and the state can do its duty"

The "inexcusable delay" in the legislature was blamed to "the determined effort of the stalwarts of the legislature to make the small business man, the home owner, the destitute workman and the distressed farmer stand not only the suffering of this depression but to saddle onto them, in increased property taxes, the cost of feeding the needy."

The governor again attacked the newspapers in which have opposed his program, specifically naming the Milwaukee Journal. He urged a boycott of the newspapers which have fought his proposals.

"When a newspaper stoops to filling its columns with falsity and misrepresentation," he said, "it is selling you a shoddy product. When a newspaper fights your battle it is entitled to your support"

J. ROSENWALD IS DEAD AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Gifts During His Lifetime Totaled Approximately $40,000,000

Chicago—(AP)— Julius Rosenwald, the philanthropist, is dead, but the philanthropies which brought him international renown, will live on for many years to come

The 69-year old merchant prince, who began a brilliant business career by pumping an organ in a Springfield, Ill, church at 5 cents an hour was more concerned by his gifts for the welfare of mankind than the hours left for him to live

"Mr. Rosenwald was mentally alert through his illness" said Dr Herbert Pollack, who attended him until his death at 2 55 p. m., yesterday. "He had apparently lost all interest in his vast business enterprises and was interested only in his philanthropies to the last"

Mr. Rosenwald became ill about two years ago. Physicians diagnosed his complaint as hardening of the arteries. He was never confined to his bed, however, for any length of time until last April At that time the original trouble was aggravated by heart disease and a kidney ailment, and he was ordered to bed

Headed Sears Roebuck

Mr. Rosenwald, head of Sears Roebuck and Co, gave away approximately $40,000,000 during his life He was vigorously opposed to "the dead hand in philanthropy," as expressed in perpetual endowments and foundations.

"I am certain," he wrote in the Atlantic Monthly in 1929, "that those who seem by perpetuities to create for themselves a kind of immortality on earth will fail, if only because no institution and no foundation can live forever"

Believing this, and with the statement that "charity is the one pleasure that never wears out," Mr. Rosenwald established the Julius Rosenwald fund Oct. 30, 1917. Its chartered purpose was "the well-being of mankind." The endowment was $35,000,000.

He had already given away hundreds of thousands of dollars, but he wanted this to be something a little different And so, on Jan. 1, 1928, the fund was reorganized and the administration was placed in the hands of a board of trustees and a staff of officers, with Edwin R Embree as president and Alfred K Stern as director.

The charter and constitution of the fund provided that the principal as well as the current income, be spent at any time in the discretion of the trustees, but both principal and interest must be expended within 25 years of the death of the founder

Helped Negro Children

Last year the fund gave away $2,500,000. Most of it was spent for the welfare of Negro children of the south. It was a characteristic of Mr

FIND BODY OF MISSING U. S. ARMY AVIATOR

Elkins, W. Va.—(AP)— A lonely pine covered knob of granite in the Cheat mountains has given up the secret of the disappearance of Lieut E. H. Bobbitt, Jr., 24, Army Air corps pilot.

Bobbitt's body, sitting in the cockpit of his burned plane, was found late yesterday by a farmer and a trapper. They had scaled Pool's knob to look over the surrounding country for the missing plane

The ship struck a tree and burned at the very peak of the crag.

The aviator disappeared Christmas day while en route from Selfridge Field Mich., to his home at Hot Springs Va to spend the holidays with his parents For two weeks hundreds of men and a number of aviators had searched the mountains.

Unemployed Offer Relief Petition To President

Washington—(AP)— Father James R. Cox of Pittsburgh presented a petition for relief to President Hoover today but said later he had received no promise that the request of his army would be met.

A peace time army marched in orderely array to the capitol today to demand work.

Tramping four abreast, the thousands of men followed a priest who presented to two Pennsylvania members of congress a petition that asked for jobs and federal help to care for those unable to find them.

Their journey was in vivid contrast to that of a body of demonstrators that concentrated here at the beginning of congress to chant "The Internationale" in the streets of the capital

The marchers began to form into groups of four shortly before 11 o'clock.

A scattering of war time uniforms appeared in the line and a number wore service overcoats issued more than a decade ago. Most of their clothing showed the effects of their long march in the rain. Most were unshaven.

Two banners reading "long live the Rev. Cox" and "experienced men from Father Cox's army are needed in the cabinet" were raised in the line.

The march began shortly after the appearance of Father Cox, accompanied by a lieutenant dressed as Uncle Sam

The band led the way, playing a lively march A group of ex-service men in uniform followed and on their heels the crowd

Only a few policemen were in evidence and they handled the crowd without difficulty.

Several American flags, some of which showed dirt and wear of a long journey, were carried by the marchers

The line wound its way up the slope toward the house side of the capitol.

Direct Relief For Farmers Urged By Badger Assemblymen

SUBSIDY PLAN UNDER MEASURE BEFORE HOUSE

Backers Claim Bill Feasible —See It as Anti-Depression Factor

Madison—(AP)— From the alfalfa fields of Wisconsin, dirt farmer-legislators have brought to the state capital what is perhaps the most direct plan of farm relief ever to gain the serious attention of an American legislature.

"Pay us," say the farmers, "out of the state treasury."

Asking that the state take the lead rather than wait for relief from the federal government, the farmers have frankly asked for a subsidy. There is $24,500,000 in the general fund of the state and spokesmen for the farmers say they are entitled to part of it.

The subsidy bill passed the assembly with a big majority. Although young Gov. Philip F. LaFollette has declared in favor of "redistribution of wealth," he has expressed no definite opinion on the bill.

The subsidy plan rode into the legislature on the coat tails of a bill to provide an eight hour day for Wisconsin laborers. Farmers were agreeable to the idea that city workers should labor only eight hours, but they insisted the farmers be included somehow.

As originally worked out, and as the assembly accepted it 73 to 9, every farmer was to receive 30 cents an hour for an eight hour day, and time and a half for overtime. He was to sell the products of his farm, and if the sum did not equal payment on the basis suggested by the bill, the state was to make up the difference. Under the plan, assemblymen insisted, farmers would be singing in the rain and smiling in the drought, and if it were a good idea in Wisconsin, it should be throughout the nation, they added.

Amend Measure

But the sober element began to figure, and calculated that the measure might mean paying as much as $300,000,000 annually to the state's 450,000 farmers. The bill is now amended so that the state may not expend more than $5,000,000 annually on the subsidy, and that amount shall be raised through dividend taxes and surtaxes on incomes. The farmer is guaranteed a return of 2 per cent on the assessed valuation of his farm and enough more to assure him at least the 30 cent an hour wage on the basis of an eight hour day.

The senate has yet to act on the amended measure.

Assemblymen John Fronek, Frank Panzer, Ray Lawton and L. S. Shauger introduced the bill—and they believe in it. Farmers, they said, have the same definite rights to profits as do manufacturers, whom they state are subsidized already by tariffs and whatnot.

"Guarantee the farmer a profit to enhance his buying power and the depression will be diminished greatly," said Lawton.

The bill provides that the state department of agriculture and markets "shall determine the cost of production of all farm products . . . which determination shall remain in effect throughout the period of the present depression." Indicative of the hope that the economic depression is nearing the end, the measure states that the subsidy is not to be paid after Dec. 31, 1933, and is to be terminated prior to that time if "the prices at least equal the cost of production." The department figures at least equal the cost of production." The department figures what it costs to raise 100 pigs and sees that the farmer gets paid accordingly There's no time-keeping involved.

Would Build Reserve

"But we would like to see this made a permanent thing," said Lawton. "In normal times the farmer will be paying back into state funds through income taxes the amount paid out in the form of a subsidy during times of depression. In fact, a reserve will be built up to guard against depression, and the reserve likely will attain a sufficient amount that the funds can be used for loans to farmers on small interest rates."

Panzer said: "If such a thing becomes national we can do away with a lot of useless federal boards and agencies attempting to stagger and blunder through to farm relief solutions."

Said Fronek: "Such a plan would educate the farmer. He would not plant crops that are not profitable. The small amount of the subsidy would not encourage him to lay down on the job. Eventually it would control farm production through discouraging planting of non-paying crops."

"The state," Panzer declared, "sets up standards and tells the farmer just how he shall milk his cows, bottle the milk, pasteurize and market it. Why shouldn't it assume the responsibility of guaranteeing him a profit?"

Walter Ingram, Chicago, representing Kiwanis International spoke on the intensive membership development plan, by which it is expected 4,000 Kiwanians will be retrieved to their clubs before the convention in June. He pointed out that Kiwanis International has been making a test among 40 clubs, six of which are in Wisconsin cities, Neenah, Wauwatosa, Racine, Kenosha, Waukesha and West Bend for stabilization of membership.

LLOYD-GEORGE TELLS TRIP THROUGH GALE

Steamer Hit by Hurricane in Bay of Biscay, British Liberal Says

Plymouth, England —(AP)— David Lloyd-George, veteran British liberal leader, arrived with his wife and daughter today on the steamer Rajputana from a tour of the East Indies and said he spent the worst night he ever spent aboard a ship during yesterday's storm. The steamer was buffeted all day by the hurricane in the Bay of Biscay.

Mr. Lloyd-George said he and other passengers had a narrow escape during the height of the storm. "We were in the billiard room," he said, "and after we left the Boy of Biscay there was a tremendous roll which threw the furniture around and piled it up about us. We had a very narrow escape from injury."

Except for yesterday's experience, he said, his trip was delightful.

The wartime prime minister looked extremely well but refused to say anything about the political situation except to remark that his views, as expressed during the election campaign last November are unchanged.

Miss Megan, Mr. Lloyd-George's daughter, said the improvement in her father's health was "amazing."

"When we started out on the trip," she said, "he was not allowed to walk more than a half mile at a time around the deck. On the way back he walked a good five miles every morning and took an active part in sports about the ship."

NEW OFFICE TO DIRECT STREET WORK IS SOUGHT

Proposed Ordinance Would Create Position of Public Works Commissioner

An ordinance creating a commissioner of public works, placing all street work in his hands instead of under the direction of an engineer and street commissioner, was referred to the ordinance committee and ordered published at the meeting of the common council Wednesday night. The ordinance went to the committee over the negative votes of four aldermen, Groth, Hassman, Steinhauer and Vogt.

Declaring that the proposed ordinance had dropped like a bombshell on the council, Alderman Vogt asked that it be sent to the street committee first, expressing the belief that that committee should study it before it is considered by the ordinance committee. He said that the council had been considering the reorganization of this department since 1930, but that it had been found that conditions could not be improved.

"The primary cause of expense in our street department," he said, "is too many dirt streets, and we can't wave a wand over dirt streets and make them concrete."

He spoke of the advantage of retaining an engineer with years of experience, rather than placing the city's engineering work with this and that engineer.

Asks Consideration

Questioning the origin of the proposed ordinance, Alderman Steinhauer objected to an attempt to railroad the change. Alderman Thompson, admitting that the ordinance was a surprise to all members of the council, explained that referring it to a committee was not adopting it, merely starting action. He pointed out that the only reason for calling for immediate action on it was because if there is to be any reorganization, the ordinance providing for it must be passed before Feb. 1, when salaries for the coming year are fixed. The matter can be given careful consideration between now and then, he said, even though the proposed ordinance is published.

The council decided to divide the Fifth ward into two election districts, with Locust-st as the dividing line. The first precinct will extend from College-ave to Wisconsin-ave east of Locust-st, and the second precinct from College to Wisconsin west of Locust. However, this will not become effective until fall, as the law requires four months before such a change can become legal.

Town chairmen in this vicinity will be invited to confer with the police and license committee on the question of outside fire runs. Milk for seven cents a quart will be bought from the Fairmont creamery and Appleton Pure Milk company, upon recommendation of the purchase committee. The purchase committee was asked to buy 12 wool blankets and fire horse for the fire department.

T. A. P. P. I. TO HEAR 2 SPEECHES AT MEET

Two speakers will appear on the program at the monthly meeting of the Technical Association of the Pulp and Paper Industry at 6 o'clock next Tuesday evening at Conway hotel. A dinner will precede the business session. Members from throughout the state are expected to attend.

Joseph H. Wallace of the Black Clawson Co., at Hamilton, Ohio, will speak on "Random Thoughts About Paper Making," and A. E. Montgomery of the J. O. Ross Engineering Corporation, Chicago, Ill., will speak on "Equipment Used in Paper Mill Heating and Ventilating."

ASK FARMERS TO PUT ASHES ON HIGHWAYS

To safeguard their trucks and cars against damage, rural mail carriers of the Appleton postoffice have requested that farmers on their routes throw sand or cinders in the road near the mail boxes. Rural carriers report that on many occasions road conditions are hazardous when they drive up to the mail boxes.

MAN FACES FALSE PRETENSE CHARGES

Charged with acquiring merchandise under false pretenses, Fred Seller, Hortonville, is in the police station awaiting arraignment this afternoon in municipal court before Judge Theodore Berg. A warrant for Seller's arrest was issued Dec. 30 by Carl Hassell of Kimberly, who claimed that Seller, assuming the name of a Fred Morrison, obtained two radio loudspeakers from him. Seller was arrested by Police Chief George T. Prim at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the intersection of N. Leminwah-st and E. Wisconsin-ave.

UTILITY DIRECTORS MAY FACE REMOVAL

Hearing Ordered in Marshfield Case by Public Service Commissioner

Madison—(AP)—Commissioner David E. Lilienthal of the Public Service commission has ordered a hearing Jan. 12 to give directors of the People's Gas company, serving Marshfield, an opportunity to show cause why they should not be removed.

The company is a subsidiary of the National Gas and Electric company of Battle Creek, Mich., and New York City, which is controlled by the American Commonwealth Power company for which a receiver was appointed Jan. 1, the commissioner said.

The commissioner said that for months attempts had been made to bring about an adjustment of gas rates in Marshfield.

"It seems not unlikely," he said, "that pending reorganization of the various companies which are pyramided upon the Wisconsin utility, the People's Gas company, and other local utilities, we find ourselves without anyone in authority in Wisconsin with whom we can deal and whom we can hold responsible for the performance of public obligations. This is an intolerable situation to which we have no intention of submitting."

This lecture has been accepted for publication by the English Journal, a magazine regarded as a standard of English in schools and colleges.

QUIETS PAIN WITHOUT DRUGS

The pains of neuralgia, sciatica, neuritis, rheumatism, lumbago, strains, headaches relieved quickly, and head and chest colds broken up quickly and safely by simple drugless treatment.

If you suffer from the above pains or want to break up a chest cold quickly, don't take drugs which may upset the stomach or depress the heart when you can get quick, sure, comforting relief without fear of upset, by rubbing plenty of Baume Bengué (called Ben-Gay in English) on the spot that hurts. Rub this famous French ointment in so that it will go down deep to the paining nerve ends and quiet them while Nature is taking hold and doing its healing work. Ben-Gay can and should be rubbed in very freely for, being free from anything that will burn or blister like chloroform, turpentine or red pepper, it will not burn or blister the most tender skin.

Baume Bengué (Ben-Gay) is guaranteed by the well-known house of Thos. Leeming & Company, New York. They have told your druggist to give you your money back if you are not satisfied in every way.

Don't just ask your druggist for "something to stop pain." Ask him for Ben-Gay by name. Look for the name Baume Bengué in brown letters on the white package. Refuse the unfair offer of "something just as good", which may burn and blister your skin if you rub it in. Ask for Ben-Gay by name and get it.

DEMOCRATS IN CONGRESS DUCK DRY LAW ISSUE

Fear Party Split if They Act on Suggestion of Chairman Raskob

Washington— (AP)— Congressional Democrats, who regard themselves as the real voice of the party, intend to ignore the prohibition issue raised by Chairman Raskob of the national committee.

It is the firm conviction of the party chieftains on Capitol Hill that Democratic success in this year's presidential campaign rests in successful solution of the economic crisis confronting the nation.

Moreover, the Democrats in congress for the most part believe the prohibition issue is one which splits both parties and should be kept beyond the realm of a party tie.

Under the leadership of Senator Robinson of Arkansas, and Speaker Garner, the Democrats intend to focus every attention on the economic issues. If the prohibition issue comes up in the national convention, as Mr. Raskob says it must, then that is the time, they say, to meet it, but no sooner.

There is considerable satisfaction among the congressional group that Raskob has decided not to press for a commitment by the national committee at Saturday's meeting on the prohibition subject he has advanced.

Look For Harmony

In view of this decision, which the members of congress regard as a victory for their stand in the March meeting of the committee, there is now every prospect of harmony at the forthcoming party pow wow.

There is full expectation that a roll call will be had at this session of congress on prohibition with either repeal or modification the question, but it appears clear neither Republicans nor Democrats will attempt to make a party issue of it.

As things stand today, the main problem confronting the national committee at Saturday's meeting seems to be the selection of a convention city. Increasing talk of Kansas City is pointing the way to that city, although Chicago has been supposed to have had the inside track.

Senator Dill, Democrat, of Washington, has joined in the campaign for San Francisco. Dill is a radio enthusiast. He believes the convention will get better radio advertising by meeting in the Pacific coast city because the folks of the east will be at home through most of the proceedings, three hours behind the western time.

LOST CARRIER PIGEON FOUND AT BLACK CREEK

An exhausted carrier pigeon bearing a registered leg band which flew into the warehouse of Roy D. Bishop, Black Creek, Dec. 31, has decided to make the place his home. After feeding and housing the pigeon Mr. Bishop turned it loose the next day but Mr. Pigeon circled right back to the vicinity. It returned at night and was captured by Mr. Bishop when it sought shelter in one of the garages. Mr. Bishop believes the pigeon has lost its bearings. The band numbers on its legs are N. P. A. 28 C 7308. The owner may obtain the bird by communicating with Mr. Bishop.

Picture Map Of Boston Hangs In School Library

A picturesque picture map of old Boston hangs on the wall of the high school library received recently from Miss Dora Kelly, former high school teacher now an English instructor at Leicester, Mass. The map is a colorful story of old Boston down to the very goats and cows that used to graze in famous Boston commons.

The sides of the decorative map are enclosed in patchwork squares that give interesting sidelights of the town. The map pictures present a short course in a Boston history lesson with the North church tower, the famous old state house and burial ground, and even the docks and wharves. Out in the brilliant blue ocean Captain Kidd's gay old pirate ship rides the waves with frigates and fishing smacks with the Mayflower coming toward the harbor in full sail. The squared description of the town is one of the most interesting parts of the map showing some of the earliest and oldest pictures of maps and places. These include the old Hancock house where publicans used to sit and smoke awhile, Mather's house, where witches were publicly condemned, the first map of Boston made by Smith in 1614 and the famous map of Bonner of the city in 1722. Foster street in the eighteenth century and the lighthouse feared by early fisherfolk called "Nix's Mate", the Boston store in 1737 and the Liberty tree are among the illustrated places on the map.

SEVERAL LIVES LOST IN EUROPEAN STORM

Floods Cover Low Areas—Navigation Seriously Hampered in Channel

London—(AP)—Several deaths were caused by the terrific storm of wind and rain which swept western Europe and neighboring seas yesterday, strewing a large part of the British Isles with wreckage and causing severe floods in low-lying areas.

Every craft afloat in the channel during the gale underwent a terrific buffeting and the cross-channel steamers were tossed about like corks, although all reached port safely. Most airplane services to the continent were discontinued.

Reports from inland districts told of furious wind and torrents of rain. A number of rivers overflowed, causing floods which inundated hundreds of houses and business buildings and practically halted traffic on the roads.

Wales, Yorkshire, Lancashire and Shropshire were hardest hit. Parts of Ireland also were flooded by the river Shannon and its tributaries. Forty families in the village of Capanmore, County Limerick, were obliged to abandon their homes after spending the day in upper rooms where they were supplied with food from boats.

EINSTEIN THEORY ONLY ILLUSION, LYMER DECLARES

Lawrence Professor Says There Is No Einsteinian Law of Gravitation

That Einstein's theory of relativity rotation of planetary orbits is a "mathematical illusion," and that there is no Einsteinian law of gravitation is the belief of Dr. John C. Lymer of the Lawrence college faculty. Dr. Lymer expressed these views in an address to Lawrence students Wednesday morning.

"There is a conviction in the minds of many that the Einstein theory arises in the first place out of compelling logical reasons, that it develops its conclusions by unassailable mathematical processes, and that experiment so far stands in support of it," said Dr. Lymer. "As I understand it, not one of these claims is true."

Einstein, claimed Dr. Lymer, founded his theory under the assumption that the results of the first study of Michelson-Morley were conclusive. Since Michelson and Morley, in their attempt to locate an ether drift, did not succeed, Einstein assumed that there could be none, and upon this mere "Absence of evidence" founded his theory. Einstein also bases his theory, according to Dr. Lymer, on that fact that there cannot be in the universe a velocity greater than that of light. "But," asks Dr. Lymer, "what right has one to build a while system on such an arbitrary assumption, so contradictory to all our mechanical intuitions? Moreover, what is this absolute velocity of light doing in a system of pure relativity?"

Refutes 3 Points

There are, according to Dr. Lymer, three objective verifications of the Einstein theory, which, according to its followers, establish its truth. All of these were refuted by the speaker.

The first of these, as stated by Einstein, hold that there must be a shift toward the red in the spectra of the stars, due to the backward pull of gravity upon the light as it leaves the star. Einstein says that "If this displacement does not exist, then the general theory of relativity will be untenable." This shift has been noted in the light of the companion star of Sirius and is taken as a proof. But, according to Dr. Lymer, observations of this type are so extremely difficult and the liability of error is so great that further observations should be awaited.

"Moreover", stated Dr. Lymer, "a simple inspection of Einstein's own mathematical work shows that this predicted displacement does not involve a single one of the basic tenents of relativity."

Secondly, Einstein predicted that rays of light from the stars would be bent by gravity toward the sun as they passed it. This phenomenom could be observed only at the time of a total eclipse of the sun, and according to photographs taken at the time of eclipse, the average displacement was reported to be as predicted in the theory. But, as pointed out by Dr. Lymer, some of the stars which showed erratic displacement, attributed to "accidental errors", were excluded from the average, and in taking the average, no attention was paid to the direction of the displacement, which should have been outward, directly away from the center of the sun. As a matter of fact, they were in every possible direction, and only one in sixteen was radically outward as it should have been.

Caused By Sun?

Moreover, holds Dr. Lymer, the atmosphere of the sun would cause refraction, just as does the atmosphere of the earth, and would account for all sorts of erratic displacements. "So far as the eclipse observations are concerned, they refute the theory," he said. It was also pointed out that not a single one of the formulas of relativity is involved in Einstein's calculation of the bending of the rays.

The third point discussed by Dr Lymer was in connection with the rotation of the earth on its long axis, one revolution being completed in about 108,000 years. However, in the case of Mercury, there is an unusual discrepancy in the computed rate of rotation and the actual rate. The followers of the Einstein theory claim that Einstein's theory of gravity accounts for the puzzling behavior of Mercury, which Newton's law was powerless to explain.

"However", states Dr. Lymer, "the relativists forget to apply the new law to other planets, since it more than doubles the existing discrepancy in the case of Venus, and increases it for most of the other planets. Moreover, Newton's law is fully adequate. It is a well known fact that there is a disc of meteoric matter flying about the sun, and the assumption of a very small quantity of this matter will exactly account for the behavior of Mercury, and will reduce to negligible size all the outstanding discrepanices in the cases of the other planets."

In conclusion, Dr. Lymer stated that Einstein derived his formula for planetary motion from Newton's law of inverse squares, and that therefore there could be nothing in the Einstein law which is not contained implicity in Newton's law. Also, in transforming the formula Einstein committed an error of logic so that when corrected as it should be the equation becomes identical in form with Newton's.

"Thus, there is no Einsteinian law of gravitation," he said.

Smiles From Congress

By The Associated Press

The senate may be all right for some people, but take it from Mrs. Florence P Kahn of California, she is quite willing to stay out.

This veteran woman representative was jocularly addressed as "senator" by a fellow member To her protest, he observed

"What? You're not out for the senatorship? Why all your delegation seems to be in the running."

"No," said Mrs Kahn 'I am not If there's one thing I do know, It's when I'm well out.'

There was certainly no ulterior meaning in it, but the entire house of representatives was called upon to observe the winner of a recent intelligence test

The victor—conqueror of 150,000 contestants—was Edward F. Pritchard of Paris, Ky. Representative V. Chapman of the Blue Grass state, stationed the youth in a gallery and then stopped house proceeding to point him out to the members.

At least one senator is willing to admit he doesn't know what a lot of intricate parliamentary rules of procedure are about Senators Norris and McKellar, argued long and strong on which of two pieces of business should come first. Vice President Curtis decided for McKellar.

Arose Senator Ashurst: "Mr. President, I regret to make this statement but it's true. I haven't the slightest idea what this is all about."

He regretted it still more when Mr. Curtis spent five minutes explaining the point.

Council Votes To Buy Steel Tube Company Building For $38,000

STEINHAUER IS ONLY MEMBER TO OPPOSE ACTION

City Intends to Store Street Department Equipment in Structure

Riding eleven strong over the persistent objections of Alderman Mike Steinhauer, the common council voted last night to purchase the Wisconsin Drawn Steel company building on Spencer-ave for $38,000. The purchase price asked by the owners of the building was $40,000.

The building, to be paid for in five annual installments, with a 5 per cent interest rate, will be used for housing street department equipment, thus clearing the fairgrounds of buildings. It also has been suggested that parts of the building can be used for the proposed fire department sub-station, and perhaps as a garage for water department motors.

Although all argument concerning the purchase of the building took place in the private session of the committee of the whole, Alderman Steinhauer reiterated his views on the matter in open council meeting. He felt that it was poor business for the city to buy new real estate when it has plenty of property on which it could build. He objected to the suggestion that the fire department sub-station be placed in the building, saying that such a venture will cost a great deal of money, and that the fire department has not been consulted as to its choice in the matter.

Tax Period Extended

The tax paying period was extended until March 1 by the common council at its meeting Wednesday night, by a 11 to one vote, Alderman C. D. Thompson casting the negative vote. Taxes paid before this date will not draw a penalty.

Members of the board of rebate appointed by Mayor John Goodland, Jr., are Alderman Gmeiner, Thompson, Steinhauer, Wassenberg, Kittner and Hassman.

Pleads For Economy

He argued that there is no economy in taking the Wisconsin Drawn Steel property off the tax roll when a building can be constructed on the west end of the fairgrounds. With the old buildings removed from the fairgrounds, there would be plenty of space for parking and marketing, he thought.

Protesting the inference that the council was acting hastily, Alderman Philip Vogt retorted that the council was going into the transaction with open eyes, that the city needs the building and can buy it now at a saving, and with an easy payment plan extending over a period of five years. He reminded the aldermen that the council had been criticized continuously for conditions at the fairgrounds, a situation which the purchase of the steel company building would eliminate, and that a fire department sub-station could be established in the building for much less money than the construction of a new building.

The mayor and clerk were authorized to draw an order for the amount of the first payment.

Aids Salvation Army

Admitting the benefit to the city of the work being done by the Salvation Army, the council approved the request of that organization for $159, with which to meet a grocery bill incurred in the feeding of transients, and unemployed persons in Appleton. The communication from the Salvation Army pointed out that during a period of three months 4,867 meals had been served, beds provided for 2,562, and help given to 4,992 men.

The mayor explained that many Appleton persons are getting aid at the Salvation Army, and Alderman Vogt cit that there is no more deserving organization in the city than the Salvation Army, and suggested that the city might save money by paying Army for meals for many of its indigents.

Requests for bus permits from the Milwaukee Railway and Electric company and the Fox River Bus company were referred to the police and license committee, and an ordinance changing the zoning of blocks 1, 2, 3, 4, block 28, Fifth ward, was referred to the ordinance committee.

The report of the audit of the poor department books and records was read and placed on file.

SELECT COMMITTEE FOR TRADE EVENTS

Plans for proposed cooperative trade events for Appleton merchants during the coming year received considerable attention at a meeting of the retail division of the chamber of commerce in the chamber offices Wednesday morning. A committee composed of Chris Mullen, Raymond Eichelberger and Edward Nadel was appointed to proceed with more definite plans for the year's program.

The organization also discussed the trade conference which the University of Wisconsin Extension division is offering here next Tuesday and Wednesday for business and professional executives and their employes. It was reported that thus far 35 registrations have been received at the chamber office from people in almost every line of business and profession.

Prim Points Out Dangers In Hazardous Coasting

The dangers in coasting on streets and hazardous hills of the city again are pointed out by Police Chief George T. Prim. Chief Prim also is warning children of the dangers involved in riding bicycles on slippery roads and sidewalks.

"Although the police department is not anxious to discourage this sport, there are never-the-less, dangers in coasting on some hills which unsuspecting children fail to see," Chief Prim said. Chief Prim stated that the hill in Jones park is ideal for coasting, but it also has its dangers due to the many trees at the bottom of the incline.

Coasting on icy streets of the city was emphatically denounced by Chief Prim. He said that that form of sport not only endangers the lives of the youngsters who are doing the coasting, but also is hazardous to motorists, who are forced to put their cars through various dangerous antics to avoid accidents.

Hitching sleds to automobiles for swift rides over icy roads is fool hardiness, Chief Prim said.

DENTISTS TO AID NEEDY CHILDREN

Will Offer Services to Extent of $1,000, Welfare Council Told

Appleton dentists have offered their services to the extent of $1,000 in caring for teeth of children in needy families, it has been announced by Judge Fred V. Heinemann, chairman of Appleton Relief and Welfare Council. The dentists are making the offer supplemental to amounts they have subscribed as individuals, according to Judge Heinemann.

A meeting of representatives of the eight groups now in the Appleton Welfare and Relief Council was held yesterday at Judge Heineman's office in the court house.

It was reported that the council's program is being carried out in an efficient manner. The only unfavorable comments passed were with regard to individuals who, in their zeal to aid a family are going into the home and criticising work already done or now being done. Persons interested in various families should inquire of the central office at the city hall as to what aid is being given families and then attempt to help rather than criticize, the judge said.

The domestic science department of the senior and Wilson junior high schools have offered to help repair clothing, Judge Heinemann reported. The classes are mending, cleaning, sewing on buttons and making over articles which have been given the city for needy families. The girls accomplish something in the way of school work and at the same time help Appleton's needy families, it was pointed out.

The clothing store room of the Welfare and Relief council is meeting with considerable success, it was reported.

Another meeting of the council is scheduled for the third Wednesday this month.

SUIT TO COLLECT WAGES IS DISMISSED

A charge of failure to pay wages against Nic Court, Appleton, was dismissed by Judge Theodore Berg in municipal court Wednesday afternoon when it was brought out in testimony that no agreement had been made between Court and George Huhn, Appleton, the complainant. Huhn failed to show that he had been hired to do any work for Court. It was indicated that he asked to go on a trip and then claimed that Court owed him wages.

The case was the first tried under recently enacted legislation which permits a man to cause the arrest of another who hires him and fails to pay wages. The minimum penalty is a $25 fine. The law also provides that the wages plus a certain per cent penalty for failure to pay must be paid the man hired.

PEABODY HEARING IS SET FOR FEB. 10

Winnebago-co Judge to Hear Request for Removal of Trustees

Examination of the trustees of the George F. Peabody estate, which was scheduled for today in county court, will not be held until Feb. 10, according to Judge Fred V. Heinemann. Judge D. E. MacDonald of Winnebago-co has been called to hear the case. The Feb. 10 date was the only one open to the Winnebago-co jurist.

The petition was filed Dec. 23, 1931, by the Young Men's Christian Association through Frank J. Harwood, president of the association, asking removal of trustees of the estate. The trustees are Alfred W. Hoyt and John Coulter of Chicago and John H. Neller of Appleton.

The petition also asks that report No. 10 of the trustees, which was filed Jan. 10, 1931, for the period from July 1, 1928, to Dec. 31. 1930, be disallowed. A hearing on the report was held before Judge Heinemann on March 3, 1931, and the judge has had it under advisement since that time.

REGISTER DOESN'T WANT MORTGAGES

Town, Village and City Clerks Will Retain Their Records

Town, village and city clerks who, during the last two years, have kept copies of mortgages on file in their offices, need not turn them over to the register of deeds, according to A. G. Koch of Outagamie-co.

Under a new law which became effective on Jan. 1, mortgages are filed only with the register of deeds. During the two years previous two copies of mortgages were made and one filed with the city, town or village clerk and one with the register. The various clerks will retain the mortgages they have on file, for the register has a copy and to take over those in possession of clerks would result in a repetition.

Several clerks have forwarded mortgages to the register of deeds and he has been forced to return them.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Heebner, Philadelphia, Pa., spent Wednesday with Miss Priscilla Leppla, 527 N. Meade-st, on their way to Marquette, Mich.

ROSENWALD IS DEAD AFTER 2 YEARS ILLNESS

Gave $40,000,000 During Lifetime for Welfare of Mankind

Rosenwald that in this, as well as other projects, his gifts should have been only a part of the total to be expended. The rest was to be furnished by those benefited.

The largest part of Mr. Rosenwald's philanthropies have been expended for the welfare of Negroes and Jews, but his generosities had no racial limitations and his gifts flowed to whites as well as blacks, to Gentiles as well as to Jews.

It was in line with his philosophy that his children, some two weeks ago, incorporated the Rosenwald Children's Association foundation which was designed to carry on, in a slightly different way, the work of their father.

As Rosenwald helped the men of many strange streets, so did he also help his "co-workers," as he preferred to call his employes. Perhaps his most spectacular gesture to the employes came on Oct. 30, 1929, on the fourth day of the stock market crash. With millions of dollars in paper profits vanishing every hour he announced that he would personally guarantee the accounts of any and all of his employes to avert the danger of their savings being swept away.

Almost as soon as he died, messages of condolences began pouring into his Ravinia home.

President Horbert Hoover said his death "deprives the country of an outstanding citizen." Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago, said "He was a type of which there are few left."

Clarence Darrow called him "a man of broad ideas and humanitarian instincts. He did a great deal of good." Jane Addams, director of Hull House, Chicago, expressed "a keen sorrow over the death of a dear friend." Former Gov. Frank O. Lowden said his "was a very fine and useful life filled with love for his fellow man of whatever race or creed."

Mr. Rosenwald's body will be buried some time today. When and where the services will be held are being kept a secret by the family in accordance with one of the capitalist's last wishes.

"I want," he said, "a small and inconspicuous funeral."

LARGE CROWD SEES BOB POLLARD PLAYERS

More than 500 persons attended the modernized version of the old and still famous three act play, "Peg O' My Heart," presented Wednesday night by the Bob Pollard players at Roosevelt junior high school auditorium. The play was brought to Appleton under the auspices of the Roosevelt Parent-Teachers' association.

The parent-teacher group has sponsored one other public performance at the school which was a great success, the Appollo Duo. "Peg O' My Heart" is the first professional play that the organization sponsored this year. The student lyceum course for junior high school students is also under the auspices of the parent-teacher association. Noah Beilhartz, famous make-up and character artist, is the last performer on the school series of the lyceum course.

CIRCULAR DISCUSSES LAWRENCE ADVANTAGES

Over 16,000 circulars explaining the question, "Why Choose Lawrence?" are being sent out to high school seniors in the states of Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan and Minnesota, according to Robert Beggs, publicity director of the college, who is supervising the work. The circular outlines the advantages of Lawrence, especially its modern plan of education, which offers a wide variety of pre-professional courses.

Attention also is called to the new Alexander gymnasium, the exceptionally well equipped library and laboratories, and a faculty of mature scholars, with broad training and rich experience. President Wriston's plan of "A Liberal Education," also is commented upon.

FAIRFIELD TO RESUME LECTURES ABOUT ART

Dr. Otho P. Fairfield of Lawrence college will resume his lecture course on art appreciation, sponsored by the Appleton Woman's club, Friday afternoon, Jan. 15. This will be the ninth of a series of 10 lectures.

Woman's Club Seeks Jobs For 35 Unemployed Women

Unable to find immediate work for women registered for housework at the unemployment bureau maintained at the Appleton Woman's club for more than 10 years, the club will launch a unique drive during the next few weeks in an appeal to Appleton housewives to find employment for those women who need the work most.

The city has been divided into about 40 districts, each of which will be in the charge of one director of the Women's club. House to house interviews and telephone contacts will be made with housewives in as many Appleton homes as possible.

The plan is to find two hours of housework each week in four or more homes in one neighborhood for each of the 35 unemployed women who have appealed to the club for assistance. Under this method, the expense of a cleaning woman for two hours a week is minimized for the housewife, while at the same time the worker is assured eight hours of work on the same day. As the plan progresses the worker may spend one day in a certain vicinity and another week a day in a different part of town, which will provide her with a steady income each week.

Drive workers will report the results of their interviews to Mrs. R. N. Clapp, secretary, who will provide women to do the housework in the homes. Many women already have given their support to the plan and have engaged cleaning women for half day work each week.

This plan was originated by the American legion last year in Green Bay and Shawano. In Green Bay the method was successful for finding odd jobs for men while Shawano found work for both men and women.

PUT BLACKSMITH SHOP ON TRUCK TO SERVE HORSES

Linking modern methods of unparalleled service with old fashioned ways of horseshoeing, William Meyer, former blacksmith at Twelve Corners, and Frank Drinks of Hample's Corners, have constructed a blacksmith shop on wheels and are prepared to go from farm to farm to shoe horses. They book orders as they are called upon and make their rounds just as modern feed grinders do.

The two men have loaded a forge, anvil, coal and other necessary tools and apparatus on a large truck resembling a modern blacksmith shop, and have established a service whereby it is no longer necessary for the farmer to shoe his own horses, or drive them long distances to one of the few remaining shops.

PLAN SUPERVISORY MEETING AT KIMBERLY

The meeting will open at 9:30 in the morning and sessions will close at 3:30 in the afternoon. State department speakers will lead the discussions.

Other conferences to be held near here will be at Shawano, Fond du Lac and Manitowoc.

COTTON TEXTILES ON DISPLAY AT COLLEGE

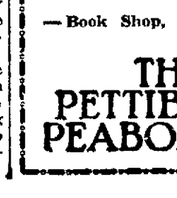

An exhibition of American cotton textiles, all designed by several of the country's foremost artists, is now on display on the second floor of the Lawrence college library. The display is being circulated by the American Federation of Arts.

Over one half of the items from the United States section of the Third International Exhibition of Contemporary Industrial Arts are included in the group, while the remaining exhibits have been lent by manufacturers and designers.

According to Prof. Charles Richards, "The woven textiles in the exhibition manifest many of the same qualities evident in contemporary design in other fabric materials. To this field of woven design our own manufacturers have only begun to contribute, although we have of late years imported large quantities of spirited weaves from abroad."

This exhibition can be inspected at any time.

MORE SNOW FORECAST FOR TONIGHT, THURSDAY

Snow flurries with another drop in temperature is the weatherman's offering for Appleton and vicinity for Thursday night and Friday.

Winter weather has been predicted throughout the state for the next 24 hours. Skies will be generally cloudy with intermittent flurries of snow. Winds are still blowing from the northwest, a good indication that frigid weather will continue.

At 6 o'clock this morning the mercury registered 25 degrees above zero, and at noon it registered 26 degrees above.

Mrs. Irwin Tornow, 1335 W. Second-st left for Florida Wednesday morning to spend a few weeks.

TEWS BILL IS FINAL EFFORT TO GIVE HELP

LaFollette's Latest Suggestion Much Modified from Early Proposals

BY JOHN E. ROHAN
(Special to Post-Crescent)

Madison—The Assembly in passing the LaFollette compromise relief bill has written what may prove to be the last chapter in the Assembly's efforts during the special session to provide relief. The appearance of Goveror LaFollette before the Legislature with the ultimatum that he would veto any bill which seeks to place relief burdens on general property means that the last stand is being taken and that from now on it will be a case either of agreeing in the $10,000,000 appropriation bill or disagreeing on relief measures.

The last relief bill to be introduced and passed was Substitute Amendment 1A. to bill 22A. Bill 22A was formerly the Tews bill which presented the ideas of relief of the Socialist party. Humorously enough the bill now known as the Tews bill has been entirely changed by the Assembly. The title of the bill and Mr. Tews' name remain, but the LaFollette compromise bill was substituted for the Socialist bill, and so the Progressive bill is going forward under the name of a Socialist who voted against it on every vote but engrossment and passage.

The proposed compromise bill has been changed quite materially from the original relief bill which the Progressives offered. The original Fons-Nixon bill raised about $17,500,000 by an income tax, a chain store tax and a gift tax. In distributing the money so raised there were really divisions of the bill.

First of all about $8,000,000 was to be used for poor relief. This was to be administered by the Ekern unemployment committee and it was to be used either to foster the development of public works programs or for direct relief where such public work programs were impractical.

The second featue was a provision which intended to give aid to young unmarried men. It provided approximately $5,000,000 for forestry purposes.

Would Provide Work

It was expected that unemployed young men would go to northern Wisconsin and that tree-planting and re-forestry programs at state expense would give them work.

The third feature of the bill was the re-fund provision which proposed to re-fund to each county an amount equal to $1.00 per $1,000 paid in taxes on general property. This, it was expected, would grant relief to general property, but it was interpreted in the light of the Governor's first message to the Legislature as an attempt to bring about an indirect re-distribution of wealth. This feature of the bill was to cost about $4,500,000 and accordingly the $17,500,000 was accounted for.

The opposition to the original relief bill came from many sources and for many reasons. The administration leaders charged that the opposition was coming from the wealthy who were being taxed heavily under the provisions of the bill and that it was charged with politics.

Those who opposed the bill, objected to it on various grounds. They contended first of all that they were for relief, but that this bill was not drawn solely for relief purposes. The opposition maintained that it was an effort to re-distribute wealth under the guise of relief and the force of an emergency and they pointed to the refund of $1.00 per $1000 on general property as an effort on the part of the administration to take money away from Peter by an income tax, for the purpose of paying it indirectly to Paul.

The forestry provision was assailed particularly by Senator Nelson who gained much publicity when the Senate adopted his $7,000,000 relief proposal. Senator Nelson who comes from northern Wisconsin charged that the forestry program was impractical and that it could not be worked out successfully. He claimed that the lands in northern Wisconsin suitable for tree planting, were owned by the Counties,—not the state.

Neither Action Taken

Accordingly he claimed that the state would either have to buy the land from the counties or else turn these funds over to the counties to allow them to do the work. Neither was done. Many claimed that the most of the young men were not in a position to go up north to plant trees. Many had no suitable clothes, or transportation, and some contended that a man used to clerical work would be a poor excuse as a tree-planter.

There were many arguments on whether or not $8,000,000 was necessary for relief purposes. The interim committee on unemployment reported that $8,000,000 would be needed. The minority report of the same committee recommended $4,000,000.

A different angle in the fight against the bill was presented by Speaker Perry of the Assembly and Assemblyman Hilker of Racine. Many Milwaukee members in both houses fought the bill because Milwaukee, the city which needs the most money for relief is compelled to pay approximately $8,000,000 and they receive for relief purposes only $3,500,000. They claim that it is unjust to expect Milwaukee to pay for relief outside of Milwaukee, particularly since the Milwaukee relief problem is complicated by an influx of many unemployed persons from all parts of the State.

Racine members stated that they had cut salaries, reduced budgets and had raised enough money to take care of their local problems without State aid. They objected to the bill because it would cost Racine about $1,000,000 and that in return they would receive only $500,000. Their idea was to allow each community to take care of it's own problem.

Another storm was precipitated by the provision which allowed the Ekern committee to administer the bill. The opponents of the bill argued that a committee of men who are given the power to distribute $17,500,000 in the year of a Presidential election, could wield enormous political influence.

Bill Is Defeated

The result was that the Fons-Nixon bill was defeated. Now the appearance of Governor LaFollette before the Legislature has given rise to speculation as to what the action on the new LaFollette bill will be.

The new Bill is changed materially when it is compared with the old relief bill. The new bill would be administered by the Industrial commission instead of the Ekern committee. This removes one big objection to the bill.

The new bill provides that the State shall pay to each county an amount of money for relief purposes equal to 115 per cent of the amount of money spent by these counties for relief in the calendar year 1931, but in no case shall the amount paid to any county be less than $1.00 per person on the basis of the 1930 census. The reason that this last provision was added was that many of the proper counties who spent little or no aid for relief in 1931 would get little or no money for relief under the 115 per cent provision. Speaker Perry fought this bill in the Assembly because he objected to paying a minimum amount of money to a county for relief purposes when no relief might be needed in many counties at all.

Under the administration of the bill two-fifths of the money would be paid to the counties upon the passage of the bill and the balance would be paid in three equal installments later in the year. The last one-fifth however would not be paid to the counties until it was assured that the funds would be available in the state treasury. This would prevent the over-drawing of the general fund and an attendant levy on general property. If any money remains in the treasury after relief has been afforded to those who need it, it is to be used for forestry purposes.

It will be noticed that the refund provision of $1.00 per $1000 which would have cost $4,500,000 has been left out of the new bill. The reason is that the tax rolls in the State are made up on December 21st and accordingly this provision couldn't take effect this year even if it did pass.

The funds for this bill will be raised by a gift tax, a chain store tax and an income tax as in the other bill. The only difference is that the rates have been reduced on the incomes in the lower brackets and accordingly less money will be raised.

This bill passed the Assembly by a vote of 73 to 15. It has been sent to the Senate and the question of what the Senate will do has given rise to many opinions. It is this writer's opinion that the Senate will pass the bill. It is possible however that a number of amendments will be offered and some might be adopted which would change the bill materially. It is evident however that the bill will be the last stand and that from now on the administration and the Senate will either agree on this bill or disagree on all relief legislation.

NEW GOVERNOR IS MAN OF EXPERIENCE

George C. Butte Has Past Record in Porto Rico and Philippines

Manila—(AP)— An experienced administrator became acting governor of the Philippines when the governor general, Dwight F. Davis, sailed for the United States on his leave of absence.

George C. Butte, former candidate for governor of Texas, is the vice governor who moved into Malacanang palace. He had previous experience as acting governor of both Porto Rico and these islands.

While attorney general of Porto Rico, to which post he was appointed by President Coolidge in 1925, Dr. Butte three times held the executive reins during absences of Horace M. Towner.

It was on his record in the West Indies that President Hoover promoted him to his present post on December 3, 1930, after stormy native opposition to Nicholas Roosevelt caused the latter to forego the appointment.

Dr. Butte acted as governor general here soon after his arrival, serving for six weeks when Mr. Davis made a good will tour of nearby countries. Both then and now he announced he would follow the policies of the Davis administration.

Dr. Butte, who has been both a lawyer and educator, sprang into political prominence when he ran for governor of Texas against "Ma" Ferguson. He was republican candidate in a democratic state.

He came here credited with a wide knowledge of both Spanish and American law. His past makes him ex-officio secretary of public instruction.

"RIDING" THE PRESIDENT

Whether criticism be justifiable or not this is a poor time for every public man who has a plan, or part of a plan, or fragment of a plan, or thinks he has a plan to relieve the depression to usher it in with a show of bitter hostility toward the President.

It is no compliment to our political leadership that every time it gets the floor it must first of all assert that Mr. Hoover is inept, unfit, lacks leadership, etc. and then say it all over again.

It begins to look like a dog fight for the spotlight. It has been repeated parrotwise until it has become nauseating.

Much of it is so personal and driven by such a malign animus coupled with proposals for ending the depression that belong to the burlesque stage, that it may lead the country to believe Mr. Hoover a great man.

This much is clear enough: Mr. Hoover has recommended several apparently sound and meritorious measures for the purpose of binding the country and its institutions into a compact mass to resist further inroads until the fury of the storm has abated.

Congress has had these measures a month. It will probably pass all of them because of their obvious virtues.

Yet it has been compelled to idle around twiddling its thumbs while Senator Johnson and others who never had a genial nor even a courteous word to say of the President, have paraded before the public mirrors and rid themselves of millions of words, soaked their linen heavily in perspiration, and dealt out enough gestures for a prize fight.

Meanwhile the President firmly, courteously but anxiously again addresses congress to inform it of "need for action at the earliest possible moment."

If all the attacks on Mr. Hoover as lacking suitable qualifications for his office be true he has yet failed to bring the harm that may result from a floundering congress thinking of nothing but throwing tomahawks at the Big Medicine Man whose charms didn't work but brought bad luck.

Denunciation of the President may be postponed until the coming campaign. Fireworks are for the Fourth of July anyway.

PIONEER RECOLLECTIONS

Many of our old-time Western pioneers, were they living in Canada today, could roll up their sleeves, congregate around the camp-fire and again enjoy the succulent buffalo steaks and buffalo tail soup which eased their hardships on the trails to the Golden West.

This Canadian holiday fare is made possible by the distribution in various Dominion markets of thirty car-loads of buffalo meat resulting from the supervised killing of 1,500 buffaloes in Wainwright national park where the Canadian government maintains the largest herd of American bison in the world.

This wholesale operation was made necessary by herd increment beyond the 6,000 the park will comfortably care for in pasturage and at the same time maintain the stock in good quality.

The steaks and soups are not all the meat of these critters by any means. Hides are to be made into robes and coats for the "Mounties" who still hit the trails of the far north. Editorial education vividly recalls the glowing warmth and snuggling comfort of these peerless wind-breakers when sub-zero gales picked frozen words from unwary mouths. The redcoats of Canada's famous police fortunate enough to be awarded one of these matchless garments may travel their posts with impunity. And if at the same time, jerked buffalo meat embellishes their haversacks, they may find their trails blazed by the spirits of Old Kit Carson and Buffalo Bill as they traverse the Arctic circle.

A CLOWN'S SACRIFICE

Harry Robettas, aerial clown, made one of the supreme gifts of the holiday season. Because he did, his act is over. The orchestra no longer needs his cue.

Robettas made an engagement to perform at a holiday party at the Sawtelle Soldiers' home in Los Angeles. When the time came the clown was ill, confined to his bed. His friends told him that he couldn't appear in his act. He told them that he would try it, anyway.

The old veterans had gathered for their party. They were going to be amused. Sitting around, day after day, remembering battles that nobody wants to hear about now, grows tiresome. They leaned forward, a little more breathless, when Robettas started his act.

They envied him. The clown was dangling by his teeth on a wire above the stage. "Some feat," the men said, as they applauded.

Robettas, meantime, as he swayed in his comic role, was biting the wire a little more heavily than usual. Severe internal pains were shaking his body. But he wouldn't give up. He was determined not to end his act ahead of time.

But when the act was done, and the applause had died away, he discovered that he was paralyzed. The strain had been too much. He can't perform again.

Many people will say that it was a useless sacrifice. Perhaps it was. But it was a glorious one, just the same. Robettas had a chance to be brave and he took it.

The memory of the back-stage scenes when he played the road on circuit, the lure of the Big Top, a blue sky scattered with stars, and the thrill that comes when the orchestra swings into a melody that means the performance is starting . . . all of these will be a little more splendid to the man who knows that his last act was his best.

A VOICE IN THE WILDERNESS

In these times of economic distress when the American mind, saturated with its own woes, is becoming increasingly conscious that Europe has very definite hopes of transferring, willy-nilly, its burden of war debts to the shoulders of American taxpayers, the opinion of a powerful British newspaper comes as a grateful surprise.

This voice in the wilderness is from none other than the Manchester Guardian, leading Liberal newspaper of Great Britain.

Consideration for the American viewpoint, so utterly disregarded by most European public opinion, is expressed thus:

"May it not be that the American insistence that Europe shall pay her debts is based upon something more creditable than economic ignorance or national greed?

"Their assertion that, if Europe can pay for armaments, she can pay for debts, represents a moral, if not an economic truth.

"What, after all, has Europe done to deserve lenient treatment? She puts forward no claim but her own poverty, and her poverty is largely her own fault.

"Does anyone doubt that if the leading European states were to say to the United States, 'We will reduce our armament expenditures by half,' there would be an immediate response, and that the debt question could be solved together with the reparations question almost without difficulty?"

There speaks the mind of justice and understanding. Coming from such a source, it may be assumed to reflect the opinion of an Anglo-Saxon conscience which for generations has been inured to the practices of square dealing and sound thinking. The Manchester Guardian's expression comes as a rare and balmy breeze from out the wind currents of Europe usually so biting and stinging with caustic criticism of everything American. But it only serves to emphasize that the great, powerful, underlying causes which prompted it are still there, a menace and threat to our future.

The jealous hatreds of a world in debt for a creditor assumed to possess too much of the world's supply of wealth and happiness are not diminishing.

Dogs of new breeds are constantly appearing at English shows. The "Ivicene," which looks like a very tall greyhound, with pricked ears like those of an Alsatian, is one of the latest.

Clouds are squeezed almost dry of their moisture as they rise, each 1,000 feet of altitude, increasing the annual rainfall at a rate of slightly more than six inches.

Hawaii expects a record sugar crop this year due to favorable growing conditions on the islands for the past two years.

Clouds and fog cannot hide the sun from a recently invented all-weather sextant.

THERE'S something about the sight of grey skies and damp weather and slushy streets and people moving quietly about, not saying much, that gives a lot of us the blues . . . and us a lot of blues . . . your sad-eyed columnist sits here with tears the size of onions trickling down his face and dropping off on his Christmas necktie . . . and there it is . . . yep, it's Christmas and New Year's that causes all of the blues . . . things get to be so gay about then that the aftermath is always twice as woeful . . . sniff sniff . . . gulp . . . sob sob . . . SOMEBODY STOP US . . .

Well, we may not be able to remember how much we spend, but where it came from and how much? Ah, there's another story. Every nickel and dime we get makes such an impression. We never can forget.

Pola Negri may not be doing a lot as a movie actress these days, but she still has her sense of humor. Recently in a hospital, and seriously ill, Miss Negri ordered her body—in the event that she died—sent back to Poland on a Polish ship. Later she asked her secretary if she knew the name of any boats flying the flag of her native land. Her secretary was uninformed.

"In that case," whispered Pola, "my death will have to be postponed until we can find a Polish ship."

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest

ACHIEVEMENT

I think no trouble ever came my way
But what it left a joy for every ache.
When I against despair resistance make
And strive to hold the dreaded foe at bay,
Whatever be the outcome of the day,
Always a sense of pride I seem to take
From holding fast against the winds that shake,
And braving the conclusion, come what may.

Men find small pride in pleasure. Out of care
Danger and doubt and hazard heroes rise;
Men, after all, life's tasks are glad to share.
The brightest smiles are those which follow sighs.
Man's greatest glory, and I think 'tis God's,
Is having gained a victory 'gainst the odds.

Looking Backward

TEN YEARS AGO
Thursday, Jan. 5, 1922

Appleton and this section of the state shivered all the previous day and night in the teeth of the first blizzard of the winter which swept down from the northeast and brought the first fall of snow of the new year, impeding traffic and delaying trains from the north several hours.

The marriage of Miss Rose Brill, daughter of Mrs. Angeline Brill, 1288 Lawrence-st, to Victor E. Enderson, Lincoln, Neb, took place the previous afternoon at St. Joseph parsonage.

Carl Rossmeissl, a student of the University of Wisconsin who won honors in the cross country run in December, was presented with an official "W" shortly before he came home for the Christmas holidays.

The name of the Outagamie Equity exchange was changed to Cooperative Equity exchange in order to comply with the law at the second annual meeting at Eagle hall the previous day.

Justin Wells had returned to Philadelphia to resume his studies at the University of Pennsylvania.

Joseph Dick returned to Milwaukee the previous Tuesday after spending the holidays with his parents in Appleton.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO
Thursday, Jan. 10, 1907

Mrs. Katherine Otto was installed as chief ranger of Women's Catholic Order of Foresters at the meeting the preceding evening at Columbia hall.

A book of poems by Mildred J. McNeal-Sweeney, formerly of Appleton, had recently been published in New York.

Mrs. Henry Hegner was at Seymour to spend several days as the guest of Mrs. Peter Graham.

Mrs. Scott Douglas, Milwaukee, was a guest at the home of Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Brooks, 474 College-ave.

Miss Mary Schmirler left that morning for Oshkosh where she was to be a guest of friends for several days.

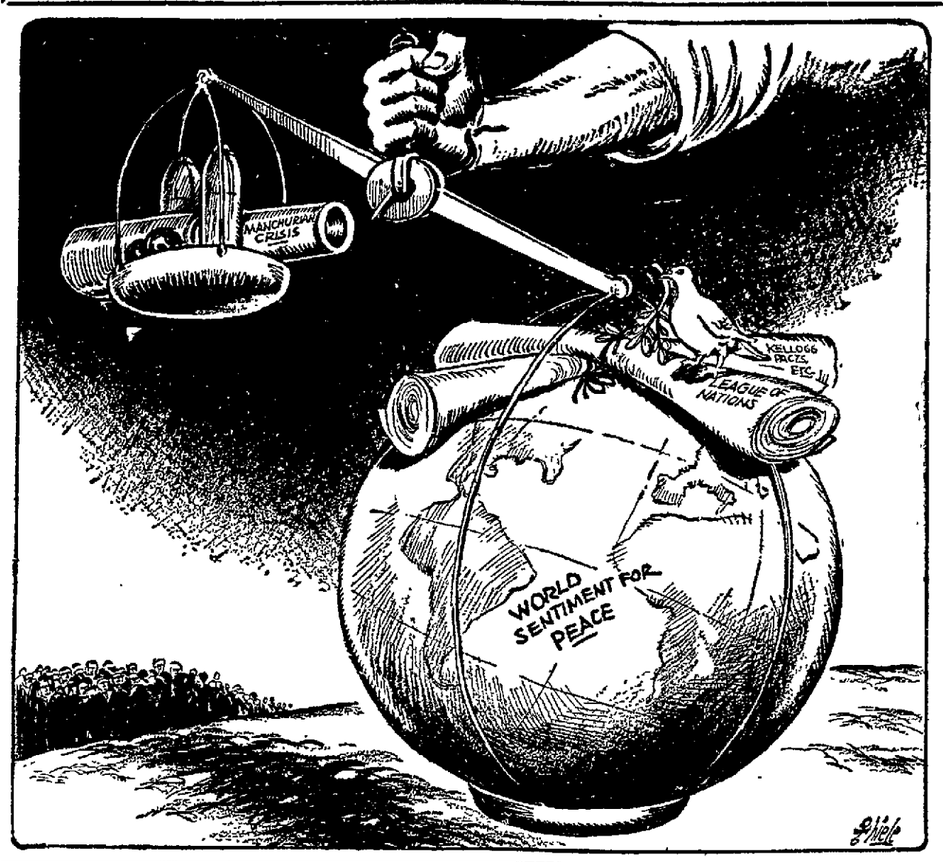

Robert Matheys had returned to Appleton after spending a few days with relatives and friends at Green Bay.

Mike Steinhauer returned that morning from a three weeks' visit at the home of his mother in New York City.

Wilford McNamee, who had been spending the Christmas vacation at the home of his parents in Appleton, had returned to his studies at Racine college.

The Modern Balance of Power!

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

THEY WHEEZE WITH EASE BUT THEY CAN'T GAPE

Asthmatics cannot gape, says Dr. Samuel Delano, New Britain chest specialist. This is a new one to me, and I quote it here today for the purpose of interesting our asthmatic readers. I wish a few of them would have a try at it, and if they succeed in gaping, let me know, so I can take it up with Dr. Delano, who is getting out a book about breathing and the common troubles people have with it.

Dr. Delano speaks, of course, from a solid background of clinical experience, and not from mere theoretical considerations. He observes that in patients subject to asthma the diaphragm is high and the abdominal organs are drawn high into the proper cavity of the thorax. But asthmatic patients who have learned to breathe in the natural or right way find considerable relief from their asthma and, curiously enough, recover the ability to gape or yawn to complete satisfaction, according to this authority.

One of the older theories of the nature or cause of true spasmodic bronchial asthma is that it is due to a paresis or partial paralysis of the diaphragm.

The belly breathing exercise which I recommend is much the same, except in the matter of nomenclature, as that which Dr. Clelia Duel Mosher has found so helpful in correcting the functional difficulties of college women. It is likewise practically the same as Dr. I. Rappaport has found helpful in bringing down high blood pressure in many cases of heart and arterial disease. I think it is not greatly unlike the breathing Dr. Delano recommends for asthma, chronic bronchitis and other chest conditions, though Dr. Delano dwells on the additional expansion or action of the lowest ribs both in the flanks and in the back.

"Quite as important as the use of the belly muscles," he writes in a chapter of his new book, "is the expansion of the lower ribs behind. . . In order to make complete use of the diaphragm we must learn to breathe with the back, i. e., learn to expand the lower back by muscular effort after the belly has been expanded or pushed forward to the fullest extent."

A gape, according to Dr. Delano, is nature's way of telling you to take a full breath in order to procure the relief of a stagnant circulation. How often do we fail to catch a gape, achieving only a futile, halfway, entirely unsatisfactory abortion

Well, maybe the secret of satisfactory gaining is right there in the lit-lower back after you've inflated the bellows quite full.

No doubt a good satisfactory gape or yawn, when one feels so disposed, is as healthful as is a good hearty sneeze when you're sneezing.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Detecting Tuberculosis in School

At the school where our two children attend they are going to give all the children a test for tuberculosis. All pupils that react to the test will be taken 27 miles to have an X-ray examination. Shall we let our children go if they react to the tuberculin test? (L. T.)

Answer—Yes, by all means. That is the very best health assurance your children could have, whether they happen to have tuberculosis or not. Every child in school should have the benefit of the Pirquet test for tuberculosis and every child who reacts positively to the test should have the X-ray examination of the lungs for the early detection of any active manifestations of the disease.

Acid Smith and Raw Onion

Please tell me whether raw onions are injurious to me. I like them, but I suffer from acid stomach and sometimes I think they aggravate it. . . . (W. G.)

Answer—Raw onion tends to increase the secretion of acid gastric juice. It tends to retard passage of food from the stomach to duodenum. It tends to diminish intestinal putrefaction and fermentation. Raw onion is beneficial in many cases of diarrhea, and in some cases of poor appetite and poor digestion. If you have actual excessive acidity in the stomach, you had better boil or otherwise cook your onions.

Diathermy for Fistula

Is rectal fistula amenable to diathermy? My doctor is willing to try it but has never done the operation (W. C. E.)

Answer—Yes. Diathermy is used in brain surgery, general surgery, throat and nose surgery, in fact it offers special advantages in nearly all fields of surgery, if the operator is not merely a good operator.

The Tinymites

By Hal Cochran

THERE simply was no doubt at all that every Tiny had grown small. "I sure feel strange," said Duncy, "but the whole thing makes me smile. To think that we have shrunk a bit and still we all are feeling fit. Perhaps we'll grow right back up to our old size after awhile."

"Oh, shucks, what difference does it make, as long as we don't pain or ache?" said Scouty. "Let's forget it and enjoy this dandy ride. Gee, we have passed through clouds galore, and look ahead, there are some more. It's fun to watch them float around, as long as we're inside."

Just then the rocket shook a bit and Coppy said, "Why, look at it. It's also growing smaller. My, I'm glad that we are small, 'cause with this cabin doing tricks, we'd sure be in an awful fix. If we were big, as usual, we wouldn't fit at all."

They gazed out through the windows for an hour and then heard Duncy snore. "That's not a bad idea," shouted Scouty, with a grin. "I think I'll also take a nap." He dropped his head in Duncy's lap. "I'll stay awake," said Coppy, "so's to tell you where we've been."

And so, while three slept very sound, brave Coppy sat and gazed around. The rocket took a sudden turn and headed for the earth. "Wake up!" he shouted. "Wake up, all! I guess we're doomed to take a fall. This crazy rocket's sweeping down for all that it is worth."

Then, just before they hit the ground, a sudden jar threw them around "Oh, look!" exclaimed one Tiny, "I know why we didn't land and smash to bits" Another said, "We were picked from the air, instead. Right now our rocket's resting in a great big giant's hand."

DRAFT LAW DECISION

On Jan. 7, 1918, the United States supreme court declared the draft law constitutional.

The high tribunal ruled that Congress has the power to exact enforced military duty by its citizens. Seven cases were acted on. Chief Justice White, in his decision, declared:

". . . although . . . compelled military service is repugnant to free government and in conflict with all the great guarantees of the constitution as to individual liberty, it must be assumed that the authority to raise armies was intended to be limited to the right to call an army into existence, counting alone upon the willingness of the citizen to do his duty in time of public need—that is, in time of war.

". . . but we are constrained to the conclusion that the contention to that effect is refuted by its mere statement."

But maybe the bankers have learned they're only half-brothers.

A Bystander In Washington

BY HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—In his younger days Carroll Linwood Beedy of Maine had the reputation of being one of Yale's most brilliant and convincing debaters.

Now 51, bald and lanky, he has demonstrated that he still has his old ability as an orator. A man able to bring members of congress to their feet cheering as he did the other day must be rated pretty high.

The occasion was his reply to the charges by McFadden of Pennsylvania that President Hoover's moratorium on war debts was an attempted "sell out" to Germany.

It was rather a tough spot the republicans found themselves in. For any one on their side to say such things about the President would be bad enough.

But for one of their own— a man who had headed their banking and currency committee for 10 years — to make such an attack was a far more serious thing.

Beedy Replies

Beedy was picked by the leaders to set things right.

It was no impromptu affair — Beedy's reply. He carefully prepared his speech. Not in the chamber himself during McFadden's speech, he sent a rush order to the government printer for a proof of the address.

It was sent to him that night. He read it twice.

Glasses in hand, with the printer's proof before him, he advanced to the well of the house the next morning to do the job.

McFadden was sitting on the democratic side in the back of the chamber next to the house chaplain. He was solemn. Just a few moments before his own state delegation had rebuked him and his charges at a called meeting.

But if he had any feelings about that action or what was to come he concealed them completely.

His Address Cheered

Beedy handled him without gloves. Walking from one side to the other, at times looking McFadden straight in the eye, he demanded proof of the Pennsylvanian's charges.

For 20 minutes he spoke to a house that heard his every word. Republicans applauded his jibes.

Democrats sat silent, apparently enjoying the whole situation. They delight in such situations. "Washing dirty republican linen" is the way they describe it.

"He becomes guilty of a crime for which punishment can never atone," thundered Beedy in conclusion.

It found warm reception. Republicans were on their feet cheering him as he walked back to his seat.

Experts say this isn't the worst depression this country has known. But everybody will admit it's the best.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY WILLIAM GAINES

New York — Hollywood is the movie capital, all right enough, but it is doubtful whether any film factory out there can match the quantity of shorts produced at a plant in Flatbush.

It's worth the long and tedious trip on the Brooklyn subway to visit this studio and the big film laboratory operated in connection with it.

Years before the infant movies learned to talk, the pioneering Vitagraph company held forth on this site. Some of the old-fashioned stages, roofed with glass-like hothouses, still stand. They serve as storage space now, and the plan is to replace them eventually with modern studio units.

Broadway stage folk pick up many an extra dollar making shorts for the Warners in Flatbush. Usually they are cast for a single one or two reel. There are a few players under contract for a series of program fillers.

Maybe I shouldn't call them program "fillers." Sam Sax, head of the studio, will argue about that. Such prominent artists are engaged for shorts these days that they frequently are billed on theater marquees along with the feature picture.

Door To Hollywood

A number of legitimate stage actors and vaudevillians viewed as possible feature film performers have been engaged for a fling in a short at Flatbush.

Work under actual studio conditions is a much more satisfactory examination than a frumped up screen test which sets the prospect at a disadvantage in many ways.

If the stage thespian's voice and appearance make a favorable impression in a marketaable short he is not such a gamble when he goes west for feature roles.

Herb Hayman, the casting director, tells me 3,000 or more extras of all types and nationalities are carded in his index system. Not a one of them, however, can get work frequently enough at this one studio to depend upon it for a living.

An average of more than 100 stars and extras are used each week. Generally it is the musical shorts which requiire the largest numbers, and usually chorus girls from the revues in Manhattan get the call. Trained dancers, they can pick up the film dance routines easily and the work does not interfere with their stage appearances.

Cameras Grind Fast

The average weekly output of the plant is one two-reeler and one single-reeler, or three one-reelers. The current demand is for the series of similar shorts. There are about 15 series in this year's program.

Three directors take care of practically all of the product. They are Alf Goulding, Roy Mack and Joseph Henabery. There are a half dozen staff writers and the percentage of scripts accepted from outsiders is negligible.

It seems to be more difficult to find a writer with a knack for short subject treatment than it is to get authors of good full length plays.

Many of the feature men who turn to shorts have a lot of difficulty with timing and pace and can't fit their material to the limited footage.

The entire plant, including the laboratory, gives regular employment to around 400 persons.

Barbs

Since increased taxes are necessary, Congress may sock the higher incomes. A sock by any other name would be unholy.

Quality vs. Price

One of the first things a wise buyer looks at when making a purchase is the quality of the article he is buying . . . not the price. It is a very simple matter to advertise price . . . but . . . there is absolutely no way in which a merchant can advertise quality and advertise it so that all of the readers will place the same meaning upon the adjectives he chooses. SO . . . this is what the Wholesale Stores say — It makes no difference what you pay for an article at the Wholesale Stores . . . if it does not give complete satisfaction . . . your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Model Home Plan Praised By Speaker

DESCRIBING the model home plan in Kohler, Wis., Miss Marie Kohler, sister of former governor Walter J. Kohler, outlined the "better homes movement" as a national aim, at the meeting of the American Association of University Women Wednesday night at the home of Miss Margaret Ritchie E. College-ave. She told of a conference which she attended on this subject in Washington, D. C., 25 of the 500 delegates being negroes who were eager to solve the homing problems of their own race. She discussed the establishment of National Better Homes Week, during which prizes are awarded to the outstanding community with the greatest improvement in better homes. She stated that Kohler, Wis., had twice received this award.

As state chairman of Better Homes, Miss Kohler expressed her desire to appoint a Better Homes committee in every community. She told in detail what had been accomplished in her own community, a scientifically planned village, and how plans are made for many years to come. The zoning law, she stated, is one of the first requirements toward a beautiful community.

Better Homes Week

A Better Homes Week is set aside in Kohler late in the spring when the gardens are blooming, she said. The type of architecture to be used in the model home is then announced, as Early Colonial for 1932. In the schools and library, all material on this period is studied. The manual training class constructs period furniture and bird houses, and the sewing classes make period curtains, rugs, and drapes. The committee in charge of Better Homes Wood sponsors and oversees the building of the model home, the complete cost of which is kept within $6,000 or $7,000. Gardens are planted, a few pictures, copies of the best posters are hung, and books fill the built-in book cases. Miss Kohler told of compiling a list of 164 good books which could be bought for $140. A piano is always placed in the home to encourage musical talent, and a heated garage and a recreation room, as well as a tiled bath, are included.

The model home is open from May to November, and a hostess is in charge. There is a constant stream of visitors, both local and transient, and at the end of the season, the home is sold with as much of the furnishing as desired, at cost. Commercialism is not tolerated in Better Homes Week, and no advertising is permitted. Everything for the home is bought or given, nothing is loaned.

Displays Pictures

Miss Kohler showed many pictures taken in her community, among them a photograph of the large new building which was given and dedicated to Kohler Girl Scouts. When asked if the Boy Scouts had a similar building, she replied, "No, but they have an athletic field. Kohler feels that if our girls are kept happy and busy, they will be good, and then our boys will have to be good too." This Girl Scout building was planned and given to the village by Miss Kohler.

In expressing the hope of seeing a Better Homes Week established in Appleton, the speaker said that she had been told that this city has a good zoning law, a course in home gardening, and an exquisite flower exhibit, but that "Appleton's ravines were dedicated to tin cans." She emphasized the need of arousing public opinion in the community and suggested a public contest of some sort that would include the children, to arouse interest and enthusiasm.

Eighty members heard Miss Kohler's talk. Mrs. Roy Hauert was in charge of refreshments. The next meeting will be Feb. 3 at the Institute of Paper Chemistry.

Keep Meal Time Talk Impersonal

BY ANGELO PATRI

The holidays were rapidly becoming a memory. In the morning John must start for College so the family had a sort of small reunion. Aunt Caroline and Uncle August had come in for dinner and Grandpa Purdy had just dropped in for a minute to say goodbye. Caroline upset the apple cart by asking, "What are you going to do with the check Granny gave you for Christmas, John?"

John skillfully speared an olive from his sister's plate and said, "O, I don't know. Guess I'll buy me a fur coat with it."

"What?" The chorus was complete save for mother's voice. She gave John a startled look but said nothing and John kept his eyes on the olives.

"Well, I don't believe your Granny would have given you a check like that if she'd known that you were as extravagant as that with money. Don't you think—" but sister June cut in.

"A fur coat. Think you're Astor's billy-goat, don't you? Think maybe Priss'll like you better in a fur coat, don't you? Take it from me—"

Just what he was going to get from June shall never be known for Grandpa Purdy could contain his wrath no longer, not even for politeness and thundered forth, "Young man, when I was your age we didn't buy fur coats with money that was hard earned. Especially when someone else earned it. We had a sense of responsibility about spending money. Such recklessness as yours will land you into serious trouble or I miss my guess."

Father felt called upon to say something. "Seems to me you might find better use for your money than that, son."

"Oh, I need an overcoat, Dad, and I rather fancy myself in a black fur. I'll cut some figure on the campus this year."

"Undoubtedly you will," said Aunt Caroline fiercely. "But if you'll take a fool's advice you'll attend a little more to your studies and a little less to your social affairs and you'll do better. When all are sacrificing themselves for you the least you can do is to appreciate it."

"Your sacrifice is appreciated, Aunt Caroline. I'll assure you"

"John, pass your plate and I'll give you more potato," said mother looking squarely at John in a way he understood. John passed his plate and Uncle Augustus took advantage of the lull to say, "Seems to me your grandmother ought to have better use for her money than to waste it on a kid who doesn't know what to do with it."

"'Twould seem so, wouldn't it?" said John cheerfully.

Mother kicked him under cover of the table and he subsided. The grumbling became general and soon the meal was over. On the way to his room John whispered to his mother, "Don't you worry, Mom. I just wanted to get their goats. They make me sick. The check is in your little bureau drawer. Take care of it for me and when I come home next week-end we'll shop for an overcoat."

You see the family dinner table is the last place for a discussion of any sort. Good manners demand that all the conversation shall be impersonal. It is much better so.

The Story of Sue

by MARGERY HALE

© 1929 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

JACK and Sue strolled leisurely down the street. They forgot the unpleasantness behind them for a little while and paused to look in shop windows and make foolish remarks about nothing. They stopped at the corner drugstore for hot chocolate and realized that it had been more than two hours since they had seen Sally Bradley and Joe Raynor turning into the Becker driveway.

"The party must be going in full swing by now," Jack said, smiling. "Corrinne is probably very gay and getting a kick out of thinking that she has put us in the shade."

"Corrinne's funny," Sue answered. "She isn't quite grownup."

She didn't tell Jack about the clothes she had sent back, or the taunting remarks that Corrinne had made that morning. But she was remembering the emerald she had pawned to help Corrinne, the time she had driven a taxicab for her and the trouble that followed, although it had all worked out for the best in the end.

"I'm tired of being a patient Griselda," she said slowly, after a while. "I guess Corrinne and I aren't going to make up for a long time."

"Angry at your sister?" Jack asked teasingly.

"No. Not any more. That's what makes it seem so strange. I'm just hurt." She told him about the clothes, after all. She knew that she shouldn't. Jack wouldn't forget as easily as she would—only she didn't think she could this time, either.

They left the drugstore and started down the street to the hotel. The night had grown much colder. It was late fall and the wind was a little wild, a little sad. Sue pulled the collar of her coat more closely around her neck and thrust her hands deep into her pockets.

The side entrance of the hotel was half a block closer to them than the main one. Few people ever used the side one. The street was narrow and dark.

"We might as well take the back way," Jack said. Within a few feet of the door they noticed a car parked. It moved on as Jack and Sue came along. Two or three feet. Then two or three more.

"Trying to get out of our way," Jack murmured, "Let's keep on walking and circle the block. Say, that looks like my car."

Sue nodded. "You're restless, aren't you, Jack?"

"Not exactly. I didn't like the idea of Foster . . . that's the fellow at the office . . . taking my car.

"And that one that moved out has all the ear marks of being mine. Still, Foster must be all right. He's the senior partner's nephew."

The car speeded up and went on as Jack and Sue came.

"Not caught that time," Jack said. He laughed. "Something rotten in Denmark."

The lobby of the hotel was partially filled with people. There was an air of gaiety as though a party some place was just breaking up. Sue waited near the elevator while Jack got their key.

She saw a woman's figure, in a dark coat, leave a telephone booth and cross to the back entrance. It looked oddly familiar. She could not quite place her, though.

Jack came just then. Sue wondered if she would always feel the same breathless thrill at the sight of his tall young body, swining along so carelessly; the frank gray eyes, with their laughter wrinkles. Would the time ever come when she would be so used to him that the glamor would go? She hoped not. She wouldn't let it happen, she said. It couldn't, anyway!

Jack, too, noticed the girl.

NEXT: Sue meets Corrinne.

ACQUIRE GRACE BY LIMBERING UP BODY JOINTS

BY ALICIA HART

Few women can do the native Hawaiian dances, yet they would be the most perfect exercises in the world for the women who is settled and solid through the hips.

Any woman can profit by limbering up her hip joints. Walking doesn't begin with the feet. The graceful walker considers each step as starting from above the waistline and calling upon the hips, knees, ankles and feet muscles to do their bit.

The way to start limbering up through the hips is to stand erect on both feet, hands on your hips, and see if you can't draw your body up out of your hips. This should be your thought in all these exercises, not to let your trunk just settle and stay put right on your hip bones.

When you have a sense of having raised the load of your body from your hips, raise your hands up to rest upon your ribs above your waistline. This helps to hold your body up.

Now stand on one leg and swing the other leg up in front, back and up in the back, not very far, just describing a small arc. When you really are limber you will be able to swing it much farther.

Now, still standing on one leg, shake the other leg, from the hip, trying to relax the leg so that your foot and knee will jerk this way or that, like a rag doll's. Reverse feet and do the some to the other side.

Next, holding your hand on your ribs and trying to keep your trunk from moving, move both of your hips to the right side, then back straight and then to the left side. If this is easy to do, without moving your trunk, then try to make a circle with your hips, out to one side, push them back, then out to the other side and then out in front. This is the motion of the Hawaiian dance and not a bit easy to do.

WOULD USE CIVILIAN HOSPITALS FOR VETS

Milwaukee— (AP) —Dr. Otho A. Fiedler, Sheboygan, president of the Wisconsin State Medical society, Wednesday urged use of the 200,000 beds now empty in civilian hospitals for the care of disabled World war veterans rather than the construction of additional federal hospitals.

The building of more soldier hospitals would be an economic waste, Dr. Fiedler said in an article in the Medical Times, publication of the Milwaukee County Medical society.

Such a program, the article claimed, would place an unnecessary burden on the taxpayer, further cripple civilian hospitals, already suffering losses; deprive the medical profession of a large portion of its clientele and increase hospital costs to the general public.

WE WOMEN

By Virginia Vane

WHICH IS THE RIGHT MAN?—APPEARS TO BE NEITHER IN THIS CASE

Dear Virginia Vane: What am I to do? I've gone with the same fellow for years, everyone in town expects us to marry and I realize now that I do not love him as I should. All the glamor and thrill are gone out of our relationship. He has a very jealous disposition and would be furious if he knew I thought about anybody else. But I have been corresponding with an old beau of mine for some time now and cannot get him off my mind. He does not live in this town. I like everything about him except that he seems to have no great ambition and does not care about making money or getting ahead. I keep trying to persuade him to make a success of life. I truly believe he loves me, but do not think he would be able to support me in the right way. What am I to do? I want to be happy—and yet I feel I owe it to myself to be married soon. I am not growing any younger. Please bring a little happiness to

LA FEMME.

If you want happiness you hadn't better consider marriage with either of these two men until you know your own mind. To know that, you must ask yourself some searching questions.

Are you really out of love with A. who would make such a good husband and could support you as you want to be supported? Are you sure that your love for him is dead and gone? If so, why on earth consider him for a moment? You can't possibly make yourself happy by marrying someone who is a good meal-ticket and nothing more. No matter how good a husband he might make someone else, he'd be quite hopeless so far as you're concerned—because you don't love him.

As for B—the old beau who writes to you—are you refusing to love him because you feel he may not have money to support you? Are you shutting your mind to the truth about him, in your anxiety to make sure the financial state of things will be all right?

It's perfectly natural that you should be practical. You can't marry a man who isn't able to support you. But it's foolish for you to hang on to A., trying to fall in love with him, when in your heart of hearts, you want B. If you're really in love with the latter, admit it to yourself and give up trying to be in love with A. It isn't fair to that boy to keep on pretending that you're going to marry him some day when all the time you're wondering about B.

Trouble with you is you want to have your cake and eat it too. You want to have A. around as a nice steady offer of marriage—and you want the romance of B. You can't work it both ways. If you're seeking for happiness you must learn how to make someone else happy and to do that you must find out whom you really love.

Gossip Will Pass

DISGUSTED MISS: It doesn't matter what your faithless suitor says—he can't really hurt you, if you know in your own heart that you no longer love him. Let everyone talk. Let gossip rage for a while. It can't last long.

You're angry because people are saying that your heart is broken. If your heart is indeed intact as you say, you won't have to be angry very long. The facts will make themselves apparent. People will notice that you're not pining away in spite of the cruel shock you've had. They will be quick to judge of whether you're truly a jilted sweetheart, or just the victim of a man's overweening conceit.

So don't worry too much about the present situation. You've got to take it all with a sense of humor. If you deliberately go out after this lad with vengeance in your heart, you'll convince your audience that you're more hurt than you care to admit. Prove your real indifference by ignoring the gossip. It can't do you any permanent harm if you have real strength of mind.

MY NEIGHBOR Says —

For those who have mechanical refrigerators, a delicious dessert may be made by stuffing eclairs with vanilla ice cream and placing them for two hours in one of the trays. When frozen the eclairs may be arranged on serving plates and topped with thick chocolate sauce.

Don't pour boiling water over china packed in a pan. The dishes will crack because of the sudden contraction and expansion.

To make pistachio flavoring, mix together equal parts of vanilla and almond flavoring.

When making chocolate candy or frosting always melt the chocolate over hot water, as it burns very easily because of the fat content.

Before breaking a cocoanut, heat it in moderate oven. Crack it and the shell will come off easily.

Tie a little bow of bright-colored ribbon on the handles of the scissors and they can be quickly found in the sewing basket.

Two-Speed

Some women certainly had a hand in the designing of this washer. In the first place there are two speeds. The slow speed gives the gentle, yet thorough action required for silks, rayons, woolens and dainty linens. The fast is needed for the heavier wash. Just a touch on a lever changes the speed. Then there is the green enamel porcelain tank, so easy to clean and always sweet smelling. And the swinging wringer with balloon rolls. Let us show you the dozen and one other good points of this washer.

COUNCIL VOTES EXTENSION OF TAX PAYMENTS

Taxes May Be Paid Up to Feb. 29 This Year Without Penalty

Neenah—Only a half hour was required Wednesday evening to dispose of business at the city council meeting. Mayor George E. Sande and all aldermen were present.

John O'Leary, city attorney, following his investigation of the ownership of the strip of land along the lake shore between E. Wisconsin-ave and Park point, reported. He said as the deeds are not clear and there might be chances for a friendly suit, inasmuch as property owners along the lake shore who have kept the land on the east side of the road opposite their property in shape for year, there might be a question as to their right to claim it.

At any rate, the attorney pointed out, there is a legitimate chance for a dispute, but there is no cause for immediate action on the part of the city. It has been taken for granted for many years that the city was given a deed to this property by Henry Sherry and his heirs, the original owners, but claims made by some of the property owners recently has led to an investigation at request of Mrs. Helen Stuart, alderman from the First ward. Mrs. Stuart moved that a committee composed of Mayor George Sande, Attorney John O'Leary and Alderman Emil Harder make investigation as to the advisability of such a friendly suit and report to the council at its next meeting.

Asks for Appropriation

Alderman Aylward moved to appropriate $6,500 to the park commission for payment of tiling Lowden and Fourth ward larks. Bids for the work were received at the Tuesday evening meeting of the commission.

Two bids were received for furnishing a light service truck for the city engineer's department, one for $571 from the Craig Motor company, the other for $524 from Jaeger-Dowling company. The latter was accepted.

A resolution extending payment of taxes from Feb. 1 to Feb. 29 without the usual 2 per cent penalty was unanimously adopted. Bills totaling $104,103.07, including waterworks department refund and payment on school bonds, were approved. More time was granted the committee on parks and public buildings on the proposed draf control for the city hall chimney.

Mrs. Stuart again suggested that the city furnish a "wood pile" for its needy citizens by purchasing a quantity of wood which those in need could saw and split up for use. The plan will be considered.

Monthly reports of the justices, police and poor departments were accepted. The poor report showed the city spent $2,109.10 for city work and $1,093.30 for its county charges.

Alderman Robert Marten suggested that the city conduct another ice carnival similar to the one held two years ago. The proposal will be considered.

The teams which were to take the diamond at 11 o'clock next Wednesday night will play at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening. Hereafter the teams scheduled for the 11 o'clock shift will play on some other night than Wednesday. The night will be selected by the teams.

COLD WEATHER CHEERS UP HOCKEY PLAYERS

Neenah—The present cold spell has elated the hockey players, who have waited long for ice. The high school squad is ready to start a series of games with neighboring school teams. The Fox River Valley league team has not yet played a game on its schedule, five games having been cancelled on account of lack of ice. Several attempts have been made during the past few weeks by the street department to flood the hockey rink at the rear of the Washington school, but all attempts failed on account of warm weather. If the rink can be ready by Sunday, the Manitowoc team will come here. Appleton is scheduled to play at Oshkosh and Fond du Lac at West Bend.

MOTORIST, STRUCK BY TRAIN, ESCAPES WITH CUTS, BRUISES

Neenah—Lester Arndt of Oakwood beach, south of Oshkosh, is at Theda Clark hospital with cuts and bruises about his head which he received at 8 o'clock Thursday morning when the small coupe in which he was riding was struck by the southbound Chicago Northwestern passenger train at the S. FATE OF RELIEF BILL AT STAKE IN UPPER HOUSE which he said would be vetoed if they came to his desk.

Senate Expected to Act Late Today on $10,000,000 Compromise

Nelson Is Silent

Senator Carroll is outspoken against dividend taxation and Senator Gettelman is regarded as unfavorable to the administration plan. Senator Nelson has not revealed his stand on the new bill. Progressive spokesmen claim he will vote for it and conservatives are confident he will not.

The 14 Progressives need the votes of Senator Walter Polakowski, Milwaukee Socialist and one independent to produce a 16 to 16 tie which undoubtedly would be broken in their favor by the vote of Lieut. Gov Henry Huber.

Senator Polakowski said he would introduce an amendment to change the distribution figure in the administration compromise. In its first form it distributed relief funds to the counties on the basis of 125 per cent of the amount they spent for relief in 1931. This was cut in the assembly to 115 per cent to insure for northern counties an amount equal to $1 for each resident. Polakowski said it cut $350,000 off Milwaukee's portion and he will ask that it be put back.

The income taxes levied by the bill range from 1 per cent on $2,000 to 30 per cent on $100,000 and over.

OIL FIELD DISPUTE UNDER ADVISEMENT

Texas Court to Pass on Legality of State Military Regulations

Houston, Texas —(AP)— A suit to test the constitutionality of Gov. Ross Sterling's military regulation of the east Texas oil filed is under advisement by a 3-judge federal court, two members of which have expressed the opinion that martial law is invoked for the sole purpose of limiting production.

Circuit Judge J. C. Hutcheson, presiding, and Judge Randolph Bryant of the eastern federal district of Texas concurred yesterday in remarks from the bench that martial law was "nothing more than a pretext, a subterfuge."

Governor Sterling insisted the national guardsmen were moved to the field in August to combat "riot and rebellion" and that the flow of crude oil from the wells was cut only because it was the source of the trouble.

"Reckless and wasteful" production operations, his attorneys said, had enraged the citizens.

E. Constantin and J. D. Wrather, oil men, are the plaintiffs. Specifically, they seek to enjoin the governor from controlling production of their wells.

The court instructed attorneys for both sides to submit written briefs within 15 days. Decisions on the suit and a contempt citation against Brig. Gen. Jacob F. Wolters, commandant of the field, are to be returned later.

The field, meanwhile, will remain under supervision of the guardsmen. General Wolters was cited for ignoring a federal injunction.

Lenz And Partner Strive To Slash Culbertson Lead

BY TOM O'NEIL

New York —(AP)— A last minute drive for material for argument will begin tonight in the great contract bridge match.

Recognizing that Ely Culbertson's lead of 14,175 points can not be overcome without extraordinary and unprecedented luck and cards, Sidney S. Lenz, his chief rival in a month's test of contract bridge bidding systems, will try at least to maintain the plus for those rubbers in which his partner has been Winfield Liggett, Jr.

Lenz and Liggett have made 2,665 more point in the last 34 rubbers than have Culbertson and partner. There are 13 rubbers left to play in the 150-rubber match. If, when the last card is laid down tomorrow night, Lenz and Liggett are still plus as a combination, followers of the 1-2-3 system naturally will maintain that the Culbertson lead was due largely to Oswald Jacoby, who resigned from the match in a dispute with Lenz over bids and play. Jacoby took part in 103 rubbers and his side acquired a deficit of 16, 840 points in them. Culbertson has said his lead would be 10,000 points greater if Jacoby had not been an opponent.

Every one of four Culbertson partners to date has had a share in the Culbertson lead except Michael Gottlieb. When he played with Culbertson at the last session Tuesday night Lenz and Liggett gained 2,665 points through much better cards on which it seemed a greater point total might have been made. Culbertson's partner tonight will be a newcomer to the match, Howard Schenken.

Mrs. Culbertson will return to the table for the concluding session tomorrow night. For the 82 rubbers in which she has been her husband's partner the Culbertson plus is only 155 points. She desires to increase it. For 75 rubbers, half of the match, which the contract stipulated she should play, the lead of her side was 3,465. Her bidding and play in the face of poor cards and bad breaks have at times aroused the open admiration of opponents.

In order to catch up with Culberson and partner Lenz and Ligget must average a gain of 1,038 points for the last 13 rubbers. Such an average is far in excess of any average gain or loss by any combination during the match.

CHARGE INTIMIDATION IN ALABAMA CAMPAIGN

Birmingham, Ala. —(AP)— Charges of intimidation of employes who would not "vote right" and illegal casting of ballots have been placed in the record in the hearings of former Senator J. Thomas Heflin's contest of the election of Senator John H. Bankhead.

Night sessions were ordered last night to speed up the hearings which probably will continue another week. More than 100 witnesses for Heflin remain to be heard while Senator Bankhead's list has not been completed.

Two witnesses from Walker, home county of Senator Bankhead, testified attempts were made to buy their votes at prices ranging from $1 to $5 and a street car motorman from Montgomery said his employer warned that the services of "pollywogs" would no longer be needed by his company.

Menasha—An inquest in the death of Arthur E. Blaney, 36, 145½ Main-st, who died at his home shortly before 8 o'clock Wednesday morning, has been ordered by Martin Potratz, Winnebago-co coroner. An autopsy, conducted by Dr. A. B. Jensen and Dr. R. B. Rogers Wednesday afternoon, revealed that a basal hemorrhage was the cause of Blaney's death.

Pile Sufferers
Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know why external remedies do not give quick and permanent relief?

Why cutting does not remove the cause

Do you know the cause of Piles is internal?

That there is congestion of blood in the lower bowel—the veins flabby, the parts almost dead?

Do you know that there is a harmless internal remedy for itching, bleeding or protruding piles discovered by Dr. Leonhardt and known as HEM-ROID that is guaranteed?

HEM-ROID banishes piles by removing the cause. It stimulates the circulation in the lower bowel — drives out the thick impure blood, heals and restores the affected parts.

Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID has an almost unbelievable record of success right in this city. So why waste time on external remedies or worry about an operation when Schlintz Bros. invites every Pile sufferer to try HEM-ROID with guarantee of money-back if it does not end their Piles no matter how stubborn the case Adv.

RAILROAD MEN ARE WILLING TO ACCEPT CUT NOW

But They Want Agreement, However, That More Jobs Will Be Available

BY CHARLES F. SPEARE

Wall Street, New York —(CPA)— There is not so much uncertainty today over the response of the members of the four railroad brotherhoods to a request from their employers for a voluntary reduction of 10 per cent in their wages as concerns the character of the concessions in the way of additional employment that the brotherhood representatives may place before the railroad executive at their meeting in Chicago on Jan. 14.

It is generally expected that the men will agree to the wage reduction and that they will, by a large majority vote, give their representatives at the joint conference the authority to reach a conclusion with the nine railroad presidents who will debate the case with them. The voluntary reductions made since the Chicago meeting in December by various railroad organizations, especially shopmen, has increased the sentiment in favor of accepting a cut in pay. A deeper realization of the crisis through which the carriers are going also has arisen from such incidents as defaults in interest on railroad bonds, the passing of dividends by numerous roads and the reduction Tuesday in the dividend on Atchison common stock, which has long been regarded as the one least vulnerable to any unfavorable chages in the transportation situation.

Want More Jobs

It was indicated at the last meeting between the railroad employes and a representative of the carriers that, should the brotherhoods accept the 10 per cent reduction in wages, consideration would have to be given to the employment of additional railroad workers and that at least a portion of the $200,000,000 saved by the roads would have to be spent in reducing the lists of the unemployed.

There has been strong dissent to this proposition on the part of different railroad managements. The most vigorous objection to it has come from the roads west of the Mississippi. Those in the east have been more conciliatory and agreeable to some sort of a compromise. It is significant, however, that some of the western lines that were not at first inclined to go along with the majority and move in a regular way toward the objective of a general 10 per cent cut have been less active lately in promoting their policy of giving notice of an early 15 per cent reduction in wages.

The contention of the railroad employes involved in the present wage controversy is that, if there is to be a 10 per cent cut, some compensation for this should be allowed in the way of giving more work to men who are either on short hours or have had little employment for months. The difficulty from the railroad standpoint in agreeing to this is that the outlook for railroad business is uncertain and promises of additional employment might have to be violated if traffic fails to pick up in the first half of the year.

Need Maintenance Work

There is little doubt that if the railroads are successful in obtaining the wage cut most of them will use some portion of the savings in a more active maintenance program. There is considerable deferred maintenance, both on track and on equipment, that the carriers would be pleased to correct. The president of one western railroad has just announced that his company intends to spend such money as is saved from reduced wages in improving the physical condition of his road and that the benefits of the cuts would not be restricted to individual labor groups, but would be spread out to include men from the different railroad departments.

It is also quite likely that the benefits of a reduction will be felt by the railroad supply and materials companies, which have had relatively few orders from their largest customers in the past year. One of the anticipated incentives for more activity in the iron and steel trade is the improved credit of the railroads which is expected to follow the wage reduction. Although the railroads have a large amount of idle equipment at the present time, they would have been in the market for additional locomotives and cars of modern types had their borrowing power not been at such a low state and their securities on such a depreciated basis, due to the heavy monthly losses indicated in net operating income.

New York — (CPA) — Britain's representative in the Washington conferences which possibly will invoke the nine-power treaty in the Manchurian crisis will be the most conservative of British diplomats, sent to Washington by the late labor government. Sir Ronald Lindsay, who replaced Sir Esme Howard as ambassador in 1929, is a true bred Norman baron, of the type and breed of Kitchener.

Lindsay

The Zionvieff letters clouding some of the old aristocracy in the eyes of the labor government, had made it seem likely that some great literary commoner—H. G. Wells was seriously suggested—would be sent to Washington. Ramsay MacDonald faced the fact that the stiffest aristocrat of them all was his best diplomat, and obeyend the scriptural injunction about not letting his left wing know what his right wing was doing. He sent Sir Ronald to Washington.

Sir Ronald is the younger son of the Earl of Crawford, who was the most erudite member of the house of lords and scion of a grand old Scottish house.

An attache of the British foreign office he was sent to Washington where, in 1909, he married Miss Martha Cameron, daughter of former Senator J. Donald Cameron, of Pennsylvania. In 1920, she died of typhoid fever in Egypt and in 1924, Sir Ronald married Miss Elizabeth Hoyt, daughter of Colgate Hoyt, a New York banker. During the preceding years, Sir Ronald had been stationed in diplomatic offices in Paris, Turkey, Russia and Egypt and had become one of England's greatest "career" diplomats. In 1926, he was appointed ambassador to Germany. He is tall and imposing, with a stiff, heavily moustached upper lip and an occasional flash of a genial smile under jutting eyebrows.

While state convention platforms are doubtless less binding than national platforms—less in the limelight, at any rate—it happens that William N. Rodgers, newly elected congressman from New Hampshire, was nominated on a platform which should pitch him far over to the left in his congressional career. It demanded not only repeal of the eighteenth amendment, but drastic tariff revision, a federal bond issue for public works, to create employment, and support for the Wagner unemployment bills, vetoed at the last session by President Hoover.

Mr. Rogers, now 40 years old, was previously in congress, from 1923 to 1925. He was a busy and aggressive member, but smothered by a big Republican majority, had little chance to shine. At Dartmouth, where he was graduated in 1914, he was a crack football player. He took a law degree at the University of Maine in 1916 and entered practice at Concord, where he became president of the Carroll-co Bar association. In his last congressional campaign, he centered his fire on prohibition and tariffs. He is genial and gregarious, member of many clubs, and an aggressive rough-and-tumble fighter.

Mrs. Violet Cressy-Marcks, comely British explorer, arriving on the Olympic, says it is her desire to get away from civilization that has led her probably farther afield and through wilder trails than any ever traversed by any other woman—possibly by any man. Her nose is nicked by an Arab bullet, her finger by a Turkish sabre and one toe by Arctic frost. Above all she is nonchalant. Slender, blonde, charming and still in her twenties, she will have something exciting to tell the folks at Mayfair if she ever goes home. But, so far, she confides only in the British museum of natural history. She finances her own expeditions, writes no books and gives no lectures.

For nine years, since the death of her husband, she has tooled dog teams through Alaska, reindeer from Sweden to the Arctic sea, camels across the Sahara, Syrian and Arabian deserts, and shot big game in the Rockies, Himalayas, Tibet, the Congo and Borneo. This time she returns from an 1800-mile trip up the Amazon and is off, presently, to Lhasa, the forbidden capital of Tibet. She carries three evening dresses, always dresses for dinner, and, in jungle, mountains, ice pack or desert, sets her table every night with Macclesfield linen and tray cloths.

'I don't like civilization," she says.

The book has 64 pages bound in board covers and is a mine of authetic information for those who are suffering from Diabetes.

BRITISH PAPER HITS AT CHICAGO WHERE "BIG BILL" RULED

London—(AP)—Observing Chicago's financial troubles from abroad, the Evening Star Wednesday lashed back at the city where "Big Bill" Thompson used to rule.

"The sins of the (city) fathers are being visited on the children of Chicago," said the editorial. "let us hope it will not extend unto the third and fourth generation.

"Chicago is in the position of some bankrupt Balkan village. Her school teachers have had no pay for nine months. Her debt is £60,000,000 and the mayor is trying to get the well to-do citizens to subsidize the city. Schools are closing and, as a last touch of tragic farce, the parents are told that their children can get their education from American broadcasting.

"While Big Bill Thompson was insulting King George and burning British classics the important citizens of Chicago enjoyed the joke. There is nobody in Chicago now to make a joke about it, for the lesson is too plain that civic virtue is the foundation of fortune and success.

"We may not be as slick as they are in Chicago but our rogues, at least, have to be more clever than theirs."

TO RESUME MEETINGS

The eight troops of Appleton Girl Scouts resume weekly meetings at the various schools and churches in the city after the vacation. The Pine Tree troop at All Saints Episcopal church will present an opening ceremony at an annual church meeting next Monday night at the church.

RECOMMEND POLICY OF "FREE INQUIRY"

Madison—(AP)— A policy of "free inquiry" has been recommended as a Wisconsin philosophy of education by H. W. Kircher, superintendent of schools at Sheboygan.

Speaking before the state board of education here this week as the official representative of the teacher training council which has been working on a philosophy of education for the past three years, Mr. Kircher urged:

Emphasis in education on the growth of the individual; respect for personalities and consideration of individuals as persons; the fostering of the spirit of critical inquiry instead of indoctrination, and the development of free inquiry as a solution to political social and economic problems.

161 GIVE BLOOD TO PROVIDE SERUM

Madison—(AP)—A total of 161 persons in Wisconsin contributed 109 pints of their blood to provide serum to check infantile paralysis last summer, Dr. W. D. Stovall, director of the state laboratory of hygiene at the University of Wisconsin, said. Sixty three of the state's 71 counties were affected by the epidemic.

Lawmakers Told Little Was Ousted As U. W. Athletic Director

SPORTS COUNCIL STILL LOOKING FOR NEW COACH

Prof. Pyre Charges George Failed to Handle Department Competently

BY E. L. ALMEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

MADISON—(AP)—The University of Wisconsin athletic council asked George Little to resign as director of athletics, the legislative committee investigating the athletic department was told at a hearing late yesterday.

In approximately an hour the committee gained an insight into athletic affairs at the university which had been only a matter of conjecture for several weeks.

It learned that the council took a straw ballot on which Glenn Thistlethwaite, head football coach, received the five faculty votes for director, and that Dr. Walter Meanwell, basketball coach, received two votes. The committee also was told that Irwin Uteritz, the new director of intercollegiate athletics, represented a compromise between the faculty and alumni members of the council.

Ask Resignation

Prof. J. F. A. Pyre, chairman of the council, divulged the actions the council took in its recent secret session.

"Did the council request Little's resignation?" asked assemblyman Frederick Krez, of Plymouth.

"Yes, in a certain sense," was the answer.

"Did you tell Little to resign?"

"Not personally, a committee informed him."

"Isn't it more or less a fact that the council made Little the goat? Was there any dissatisfaction with Little's program in general?"

"Not in general. The council had the impression that he had failed to handle the affairs of the department competently at all times."

Pressed by Krez and Assemblyman Oscar Schmiege of Appleton, for "one specific reason" for Little's resignation, Pyre countered with the assertion that the resignation came from an "accumulation of feelings," that there had been "bungling" and "vacillation" at times.

Krez said he understood the athletic council was ready to dispense with Coach Thistlethwaite a year ago but that the council received a flood of telegrams from alumni which asked for his retention. Pyre said he did not think the council was ready and expressed doubt that telegrams would influence its decision.

Krez also asked whether Northwestern had been dropped from the football schedule at Thistlethwaite's suggestion. Pyre said he thought not. Krez suggested that other Big Ten schools with good athletic records "don't take the faculty seriously" and asked whether the same situation could not exist at Wisconsin. Pyre suggested that other schools would keep out of trouble if the faculty were given more voice in athletic matters.

Looking For Coach

The witness said the council has not yet decided on a coach to succeed Thistlethwaite. In response to a question from Assemblyman Krez who asked whether the council plans to get a coach of national reputation, Prof. Pyre said the council was looking over "the entire field."

George Downer, director of publicity, and George Levis, director of ticket sales, and Robert Foss and Harry Schwenker, their respective assistants, were other witnesses. The former denied that Thistlethwaite had ever asked him to "play up" certain players on the squad Krez said "much dissatisfaction" among the members of the team was due to the newspaper space given to Gregory Kabat, captain-elect. Levis was questioned mainly about his duties and the cost of operating his department.

LOYOLA QUINT PLAYS FOUR GAMES IN 5 DAYS

Chicago—(AP)—Loyola's undefeated basketball team will have to do some fast hustling around the hoops in the next week to keep in the unbeaten class.

The Ramblers, victorious in nine straight games this season, will leave tomorrow for four games in five days schedule without much help expected from their ailing center and star, Joe "Moose" Wagner. Wagner, who weighs 200 pounds and stands six feet three, is incapited with an infected finger.

Loyola's schedule calls for games against the Western state teachers at Kalamazoo, Mich., Friday night; John Carroll University at Cleveland, Saturday; City College of Detroit at Detroit, Monday and Michigan State normal at Ypsilanti, Mich., Tuesday.

'SIPPI VALLEY MAY FIRE LEAGUE PREXY

Chicago—(AP)—Minor league club owners evidently started something at West Baden, Ind., last month when they decided to replace the presidency of their association with an unpaid commission.

Since then several club owners have suggested that their respective leagues do likewise with economy as the chief reason. The latest league that may be affected is the Mississippi Valley league. Dr. Charles Logan, president of the Keokuk team of that circuit, suggests the move to save money.

Mike Sexton, who was released as president of the National Association of Professional Baseball clubs, has been mentioned for the Mississippi Valley league presidency.

VIKES SCRIMMAGE POINT TEACHERS AT GYM TOMORROW

Haase and Foote Work at Forward Because of Colbert's Injury

WITH the first game of the 1932 season and incidentally the first Big Four game scheduled Monday at Ripon, Coach Arthur C. Denney of Lawrence college is driving his proteges hard and Friday afternoon and Saturday afternoon has the quintet slated for heavy scrimmage sessions.

However, the scrimmages started last night when the Viking mentor sent his squad against a group of former greats on the Lawrence campus. Among members of the team were Rod and Bob Ashman, Jackola, and Jake Zussman. The Vikings seconds battled the Appleton Bears, a group of amateur players in the city who have gotten together one of the strongest simon pure fives in this section.

Tomorrow afternoon Coach Denney will send his first squad against Eddie Kotal's Stevens Point Teachers. The two teams will engage in a regular game as the first event on the afternoon's program and then will drill with each of the coaches directing play from the sidelines.

The Lawrence reserves will go to Stevens Point during the afternoon to meet the Point reserves in the latter city.

Saturday afternoon Denney again will call on his alumni cagers in the valley and will send the Vikings against a team composed of Biggers, Laird, Ashman, Pierce, Zussman and Jackalo. The alums are a smooth working aggregation and will offer plenty of competition.

All of the Vikings survived the holidays and returned to school well, except Bill Colbert. He pulled a muscle last Saturday afternoon in the first drill after the holidays and has just returned to the squad. His activity so far has been confined to shooting however, and Denney may find reason to let him go easy until after the Ripon game Monday night.

Willis Haase and Bill Foote, both guards, have been sent into the forward position occupied by Colbert. Coach Denney, because he has few tall reserves, wants his extra guards to be able to fill in at forward. The positions, however, are not new to either of the boys, for they have played them in high school or former college games. Sid Felts, Denney's 6 foot 4 inch center also has been showing well in recent drills.

SUPERIOR TEACHERS WIN THEIR 5TH GAME

Superior—(AP)—The Superior State Teachers annexed their fifth victory of the season in an overtime basketball game last night by defeating Minn., 38 to 33.

Paced by Chester Pepper, substitute forward Superior split the Concordia defense after Moran had given Concordia the lead following a 31-31 tie at the end of the regular contest.

BABE WILL ASK YANKEES AGAIN PAY HIM $80,000

Points Out Last Year Was Good One; Says Yanks Will Cop

BY ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(AP)—Babe Ruth not only thinks he still is worth $80,000 a year to the Yankees, depression or no depression, but he has no idea whatever of quitting the game so long as he can hold its own with "these young fellas."

"I might like to be a manager of a big club some day although I haven't given that much thought," said Ruth. "I want to round out at least 20 years playing as a regular and as many more as I can go. The only thing I don't want to do is hang around so long they have to show me the bench or the gate and tell me I'm just an old man. But the way I feel now I'm good for at least five more years."

In better condition today than he has ever been and with the figures of his trainer, Artie McGovern, to prove it, Ruth is ready to show his employer a number of good reasons why he should be kept on the payroll without a cut.

Worth $80,000

"I haven't talked it over yet with Colonel Ruppert," Ruth told newspapermen after a brisk workout before the cameras, "and I don't expect any trouble when I do but I still think I'm worth that $80,000. I'd like to sign for that on a one or two year basis.

"Last year was one of the best I have ever had, despite the injury that laid me up for a few days in Boston. But for that I think I wouldn't had a good chance to break the home run record. I still think I can do it. The ball doesn't seem any deader to me. When I sock it right, it still goes plenty."

Among other items of public interest, Ruth admits he recently shot a round of 73 at golf: that his waist-line now is reduced to a mere 38 inches (a foot less than it measured in 1925); that he's a better movie actor than he thought he was; and that the 1932 American league pennant race "should be a breeze" for the Yankees.

"Yeah, I know the athletics still have Grove and Earnshaw and those babies can pitch and this Simmons can hit," he argued, "but we should have beaten 'em last year and we will do it this year because the Yanks will have a lot better pitching."

Ruth was to have had a workout with Max Schmeling yesterday for the benefit of photographers at McGovern's gymnasium but the heavyweight champion at the last minute telephoned he was otherwise engaged.

"Hey, you don't suppose that guy took a runout, do you?" demanded Ruth at he swung a left hook to the chin that dazed McGovern during a brief sparring match.

Chaff 'n Chatter

By Gordon R. McIntyre

A. A. U. and Y. M. C. A.

PERHAPS you remember a story carried recently from New York about the plan adopted by the Amateur Athletic Union to cooperate with the YMCA in registration of amateur athletes.

There wasn't much said about it at the time, but the announcement settled a dispute of many years standing. It had been the YMCA's contention that athletes who took part in YMCA activities under the organization's standard of amateurism were eligible for any amateur competition. The A. A. U. however refused to recognize an amateur unless he was registered with that organization.

Under the new arrangement, a YMCA registration card will be accepted in lieu of registration in the A. A. U. To conform with this plan the YMCA has set up a national bureau or registration and is working out plans for state and local bureaus in direct connection with a national office. Registered athletes must meet all eligibility requirements of either organization.

We received a full report of the agreement recently. It is interesting to note, in the report, that the A. A. U. "recognizes property of the YMCA in regarding 'closed' YMCA meets or events, organized leagues, tournaments and meets which are conducted under the auspices of the YMCA in cooperation with special classes of individuals representing churches, schools, industrial and commercial groups. Individuals participating in such closed events shall be governed by the rules of the YMCA."

The A. A. U. conceded a point or two in admitting this clause in the agreement. In fact the A. A. U. appears to have conceded several points to the YMCA as all of the articles except one, set up by the latter organization, have been approved by the A. A. U.

The A. A. U. held to one clause, however, and as there is considerable argument in favor of it, the YMCA agreed to abide by the A. A. U. ruling. It is the point that prevents participation by officials in amateur athletics.

"Because the A. A. U. does not permit officials who accept remuneration for officiating at games to compete as amateurs, whereas the YMCA does, it is understood that a YMCA member who has accepted remuneration for officiating at amateur events shall not be eligible to participate in open events sanctioned by the A. A. U." the rule reads.

The A. A. U. has been high-handed in the past in its control of amateur athletics. The agreement with the YMCA is a step in the right direction. It should do more to help promote amateur athletics than any other single factor as the YMCA is in a position to develop outstanding amateur performers. The plan should work to the advantage of both organizations and encourage greater participation in amateur sports.

SIX DAY BIKE RACE OPENS AT MILWAUKEE

4,000 Persons See First Night's Feature Races; One Accident

Milwaukee—(AP)—The Milwaukee auditorium today became a popular gathering place for the city's sports fans, some 4,000 of whom already have caught their first glimpse of a six-day bicycle race now in progress in the civic center building.

Ten teams of two riders each were started around the 10-laps-to-a-mile oval at 9 o'clock last night by Gus Dick, personal representative of Governor Philip LaFollette. The governor also was present.

Cohen and Elder, the Jewish-Irish team, and Stubecke and Schaller, the German team, spurred into an early lead and were tied for first place at the end of 67 miles. Other entrants were bunched close behind.

George Thomas, brother of Bobby Thomas, Kenosha, the national amateur bike champion, suffered minor injuries when he plunged over the railing into the box seats during one of three preliminary races.

Several hundred Kenosha citizens shouted their approval as Bobby won two out of three heats in a special half-mile match race with Leo Steele of Milwaukee and won the event. Oreal Steele of Milwaukee won the alternate match race and Herman Keller, Milwaukee, defeated Clarence Heilman, Milwaukee in a pursuit race.

When the Minnesota basketball team appeared in the dedicatory game in the new North Dakota State College gymnasium, it marked the first time in years that a Gopher quintet opened the season away from home.

ORANGE CAGERS TO MEET WEST BAYS TOMORROW NIGHT

Appleton Still Undefeated in Valley Basketball Conference

APPLETON high school cagers tonight will close drills for the first conference game of the new year, Friday night at West Green Bay high school gymnasium. Two teams, the varsity and the seconds, will make the trip to the Bay.

With Appleton still undefeated in league competition and with the West Bays showing a flock of veterans and defeated in only one game this season, the Orange faces one of its greatest tests tomorrow. The Bays are tall, experienced and will be playing on their own floor, a distinct advantage because the Bay floor is a mammoth affair, the like of which Appleton has played on this season, excepting the Wisconsin Rapids game.

Drills during the last week have been designed to smooth over some of the rough spots in the Orange offence. Coach Joseph Shields has had the boys going over a lot of play often, and has drilled them on out of bounds plays until they were blue in the face. Defensive practices also have been stressed and some of the opposition used against the Orange is much more proficient than any West can dig up.

Several new men have been working with the Orange squad during the last week. Wallace, big junior center has been drilled in handling the pivot job in case Peotter's knee goes bad on him. Bill has been performing regularly in practices this week with no trouble whatever. However, the knee has a habit of going wrong when least expected and Coach Shields is trying to develop a capable substitute.

Bowlby, diminutive forward who showed so well against Neenah last week has been working in the various forward positions and probably will get a chance to show against the Bays. Offensively he is one of the best performers on the Orange quint, and despite his size he gets more chances at the hoop than several mates put together.

The West Bays started the season with a win over Marinette and then took a trimming from Sheboygan's Chairs. The following week the team invaded Oshkosh and knocked the Sawdust city team out of the undefeated class.

Koch Glasses won two more games in Eagles bowling league to hold the lead in the loop. The Goos Specials were the victims. Specials won the first game because the Glasses were hitting low scores, all except Boehm who rolled 205. In the second game the Glasses won with Her Strutz' 196, and then copped the third with his 190. He had a 564 series.

Koester rolled one of the highest individual games in the city this year as the O. K. Taxis won one game from the Sell Specials. He toppled 276 pins in the one game and had 634 series. The Taxis dropped the first two games because of too many low scores. Koester had a bad split to start the match, hit 10 straight strikes and then pulled a seven on the last ball.

Appleton Pure Milks turned in the only three game win with the Graef Lumbers the victims. Flyn had 189 in the first game, Krabbe 193 in the second and Esser 184 in the third.

Modern Cleaners won the first game from the Stark Hotels and dropped the last two because of low totals. Laabs with 168 and 185 paced the Hotels in their wins.

TILDEN STILL KING OF PRO NET STARS

New York—(AP)—Big Bill Tilden, a champion for more years than he cares to count, remains the king of the professional racquet swingers despite the best efforts of Vincent Richards, a rival since the days when they both were amateur aces, to dislodge him.

Richards, who turned pro in 1926 just when he appeared to have Big Bill on the run, renewed the rivalry with Tilden last night as the climax of a two-day professional exhibition series at Madison Square Garden and, much as usual, went down in a three-set defeat.

The scores were 6-2, 6-3, 6-1.

From start to finish, Richards, newly crowned national indoor pro champion, never could cope with the Tilden speed.

GOPHER SEXTET SEEKS BID TO OLYMPIC GAMES

Minneapolis—(AP)—The University of Minnesota and the Upper Peninsula team of Houghton, Mich., meet here tonight for the right to enter the finals of the United States Olympic hockey championship.

Tonight's winner is scheduled to leave immediately for New York to play for the title against a New York-Boston combination, probably on Sunday.

Minnesota, however, has protested the Olympic Hockey committee's plan to placing the New York-Boston team in the finals, and it was not certain today whether the gophers would go east in the event they should win tonight.

HARRY KASKEY SEEKS OLD SKATING HONORS

Virtually out of competition since 1924 when he starred with the American Olympic team, Kaskey has entered the national speed skating championships at Oconomowoc, Jan. 16 and 17. He won the national title along with almost every championship he competed for back in 1923 and has been training hard for his comeback.

WOLVERINES MEET BADGERS SATURDAY ON MADISON COURT

Cage Games Between Schools Always Have Been Close Battles

MADISON—When Wolverine and Badger clash, the fur always flies and their meeting Saturday night, when Coach Walter E. Meanwell's University of Wisconsin basketball team takes the floor against Coach "Baldy" Capon's Michigan squad at the Field House here will undoubtedly develop the traditional tough battle.

The two teams have not met since the season of 1928-1929, when the Wolverines won both games—the only ones Wisconsin lost that season—the result being a tie between them for the Conference Championship. The second game this season will be played at Ann Arbor, Feb. 29.

Although Michigan holds a 9-7 margin on games won since Badgers and Wolverines first contested on the court in 1919-1920, there have been few top-heavy scores. The Wolverines lead in total points scored—362 to 343—and made the largest score—42-19 in 1927-1928. Wisconsin won the first game of the series, 40-13 in 1920. This team, however, was not coached by Dr. Meanwell. Two years later, Wisconsin won the first game by a score of 18-16 and lost the second, 17-18. The following season, the Badgers won both games, by scores of 18-15 and 16-11.

ART SHIRES TO HELP BRAVES IN PENNANT RACE

Nothing to Strengthen Pitching Staff; Need Another Catcher

(Note:—This is the last of a series of stories on 1932 major league baseball prospects.)

BY BILL KING
Associated Press Sports Writer

BOSTON—(AP)—The off-season has been the dullest in years for the Boston Braves and new faces will be few when Manager Bill McKechnie starts the 1932 operations in St. Petersburg, Fla., late next month.

The tribe was, and still is, overburdened with trading material but it's chieftains were only able to make two important deals to bolster the weakest hitting outfit in the National league.

The outstanding trade reinstated Art Shires as a big leaguer and "the great one," who had quite a year with Milwaukee, is bent on becoming the best first baseman in the senior circuit. Bill Knothe, who labored in Seattle during 1931, will cross the continent to try to plug the wide gap at third base.

The passing of Freddy Maguire, to Louisville, will force McKechnie to move the colorful Rabbit Maranville over to second base and give Bill Urbanski the aging midget's old shortstop berth.

Most of the Braves' hitting last season was supplied by the outfield, Wally Berger, Wes Schulmerich and Bob Worthington, and this trio has not been tampered with. Randy Moore and Early Clark will again serve as utility fielders.

Berger, one of five National leaguers to play in every game closed last season with a .323 batting average, getting 199 hits, including 44 doubles and 19 homers. Schulmerich was the only other brave to pass .300 The tribe, as a whole, hit for .258 against the league's team average of .277 and its fielding was only a point better than the .971 general average.

Nothing much has been done to strengthen the pitching staff, which collapsed late last season, and Ed Brandt, Tom Zachary and Harry Seibold, who were credited with 39 of the tribe's 64 victories, will again carry the hurling burdens.

McKechnie has plenty of other pitchers and it is likely that he will attempt to trade some of them. He could use a seasoned catcher to help hard working Al Spohrer, whose ludicrous battle with Shires is still enshrined in the memory of the New England boxing public.

Bierman Will Bring Great Teams Back To Minnesota

BY LAWRENCE PERRY
Copyright 1932

NEW YORK—(CPA)—One sure prediction concerning sport in this new year may be made. Minnesota will enter upon a cycle of gridiron prestige such as she knew in the palmy days of the late Dr. Harry L. Williams.

There is no precise way of estimating what Bernie Bierman, who has been called back to his alma mater from Tulane, will do with the man power available at Minneapolis. But unquestionably he will do a lot. No coach in the country has greater ability to teach fundamental football, which means line charge, tackling, following the ball, blocking and interference. Besides, he is equipped with a tactical mind.

Tulane's play against Southern California was amazing in its resourcefulness, in its swift and deceptive changes of direction, in its driving power. Outweighed by the Trojans, the Greenies took command at the outset and never let up. But for the inspired play of Ernie Pinckert that game at the Rose Bowl might well have resulted in a defeat for the mighty men of Los Angeles and, even with Pinckert going great guns, Tulane would have had an excellent chance to win had it not been for several disastrous fumbles.

At Minneapolis Bierman will deal with bigger and brawnier material. The writer year after year in the past decade has visited the football camps of the major teams of the country; but nowhere, not even at the University of Washington, has he seen so many physically powerful men as at Minnesota. Recollection comes of a situation a few years ago at Minneapolis when shoes of an especially large size had to be built for five members of the varsity eleven.

Bierman's problem, it seems, will relate solely to the application of speed to his giant northmen and the development of some such spirit as inflamed his Tulane players. It would, of course, be too much to expect that he will be able to kindle fire in his Gophers of intensity equal to that which characterized the Greenies. Any man of magnetism finds little difficulty in steaming up the players of Dixie. Spirited action is of the essence of almost any southern football outfit.

But at Minnesota Bierman will be called upon to handle men of a different type, big men of Nordic temperament, not easy to arouse to high pitch. But once keyed, there is plenty of fire. Bierman played on Gopher teams. He is a native of the mid-northwest. If any man knows how to reach the souls of these northmen, he does. He is a dour type, is Bernie, but he seems to succeed with players where he fails with writers.

So look out for that colossus whose shadow already begins to loom upon the northern horizon.

SPECIALIZE IN PROGRAMS FOR SMALL GROUPS

Federal Radio Chief Expects Many Stations to Give Such Presentations

BY ROBERT MACK

Copyright 1932 by Cons. Press

Washington—(CPA)—The day of the "specialist" is dawning in radio.

Programs of particular appeal to a limited number of the audience now are being offered by a number of stations and by the networks, while some stations are confining their offerings exclusively to minority interests. Although the practice has not yet become widespread, the trend is discerned by radio authorities and they predict that gradually it will become the part of a well-rounded radio structure.

Maj. Gen. Charles Mck. Saltzman, chairman of the eFderal Radio commission, today said he believes that the time will undoubtedly come when certain stations will specilize on certain types of programs, whether they be philharmonic concerts or jazz, high-brow educational programs or "the other kind." John W. Elwood, vice president of the National Broadcasting Co., and a program expert, believes there is a definite place on the air for the "specialist."

There now are on the air, besides the run-of-the-mine commercial stations, broadcasters who specialize in educational and religious programs. In addition the socialist party operates station WEVD in New York City, while the Chicago Federation of Labor operates WCFL. The Loyal Order of the Moose has its own station, WJJD at Mooseheart, Ill., while several other fraternal organizations are station licensees.

Better Entertainment

Discussing program trends, General Saltzman declared that just as improvements are made in technical operation with better signals laid down for listeners, just so must program improvements to be made with better entertainment laid down in the homes of the public.

"In this regard," he said, "the broadcaster oftentimes finds himself sorely tried. In a metropolitan service area, for example, there is a class that desires nothing but the music of philharmonic concerts while another class clamors for jazz dance music. A time undoubtedly will come when certain stations will specialize on certain types of programs, but that time not having arrived, the average broadcaster is left to wrestle with the program of endeavoring to offer to his customers a stock of programs to meet the demands of a varied audience."

Mr. Elwood said his years of activity in radio programing led him to the conclusion that specialized programs slowly but surely are gaining headway. He always tried to build programs that would be acceptable to towns of 25,000 or under, he declared, but using the talent from the great centers where it naturally congregates.

Program building, he said, of necessity has been a rather slow process, with the changes dictated by listener reaction. He pointed out that when symphony orchestras first were introduced to the radio audience, there was general complaint about too much of this type of music.

"Now," he asserted, "the demand is for more and more symphonic music. Walter Damrosch, I believe is responsible for most of that sentiment. He made music live for the average person."

BADGER POSTOFFICES OWE U. S. $5,126.18

(Post-Crescent Washington Bureau)

Washington—Of the $1,162,233.45 due Uncle Sam from postoffices delinquent in payment of final balances on June 30, 1931, Wisconsin postoffices owed a total of only $5,126.18, according to a report submitted to Congress.

The earliest history of pipe organs cannot be traced exactly, although it is assumed that they were developed from bagpipes and Pan pipes.

Brook Trout Vanishing From Wisconsin Streams

BY BERT CLAFLIN

What has become of our brook trout? Why is it that anglers of long experience now find it very difficult to secure a catch of decent sized fish? I hear someone say: "That doesn't apply to me. Why, I get my limit every time I go out, etc." It is perhaps not elegant to call such a person a plain liar, yet everybody has a right to his own opinion, and everybody can think as he pleases. The big-mouthed oracle on the street corner never convinces anyone of his wisdom. Boasts of that kind come chiefly from young, inexperienced anglers, or perhaps from someone having equipment to sell—anyhow, not from one who speaks the truth.

CLAFLIN

The fact is, our trout streams have become sadly depleted of the beautiful flashes that once were so plentiful that it was indeed a poor fisherman who did not get his limit every time he went forth.

Time was when we made regular weekend excursions to the Peshtigo, the Thunder, the Wausaukee, the Wolf, the Oconto, the Pike, or to any one of a dozen other streams, and quite safely promised a mess of trout to our friends before starting. I was no chore to take a hundred fish in a single day, and there was no limit at that time. Why? Simply because the streams were full of fish, anglers scarce, and automobiles scarcer.

The bag limit has been reduced to a pitiful 15 per day, which is enough, considering the scarcity of the trout. But, reducing the bag limit is not the solution of the problem. It never was nor ever will be. The only way to bring our trout back is to stop catching them entirely for a period long enough to enable them to reproduce their kind as nature intended them to do.

Commission Duties

We have a Conservation commission, and that commission is vested with ample power to do things as they should be done. And I do not believe any of its members are fishermen.

It is a simple matter to restore our trout; and it is also a simple matter to restore our local game of the uplands. The Commission could do it. They have the power. But, for some unexplainable reason, they do not seem to want to resort to any radical action, which in the case of our fish and game is very necessary at the present time. They dabble about, building hatcheries at great expense to the people of Wisconsin, and they are not working out satisfactorily. The situation cannot be camouflaged. Just as surely as the night follows the day, if these methods are kept up a while longer our trout will pass from the picture as the wild pigeons did.

After all, as I have stated, there is only one way to bring back our brook trout, whether individually we like it or not. And that is to stop catching them until they again become plentiful enough to warrant another open season. It would not take long—just a few years. They are very prolific. Every mature female speckled trout carries 3,000 eggs and the rainbow even more. The season should be closed temporarily, and the thousands of dollars that are spent so inefficiently in attempts to get results by artificial propagation should be used to hire wardens who should then be required to get out onto the streams where they belong.

I think what Smedley D. Butler said to the admirals at Washington applies nicely to the hatcheries.

Speaking of the Weather--

by CHARLES TALMAN of the U.S. Weather Bureau

About The Only Thing That A "Rain Maker" Can Really Make Is Money From Gullible Farmers

The "rain maker" has hitherto enjoyed a singular immunity from the operation of laws designed to protect gullible citizens from being bamboozled. The Federal Food and Drugs Act has conspicuously restricted the sale of fake nostrums, the Postoffice Department has warred on worthless stock; but nothing has yet been done about the charlatan who, with the aid of a few mysterious chemicals and a plausible tongue, beguiles money out of farmers' pockets in payment for showers that are the work of unaided Nature.

The rain-maker enters a community where crops are perishing. He promises to produce rain within a specified time after the signing of a contract, according to which he is a receive, say, a thousand dollars an inch for whatever rainfall occurs. "No rain, no pay," he says. If the showers do not arrive on time, the farmer loses nothin. If they do, the salvation of his crops puts him in such a happy frame of mind that he cheerfully pays the bill without inquiring too narrowly into the method.

Sometimes the rain comes as promised, and sometimes not. The shrewd rain-maker will score a pretty large percentage of successes, for two reasons. In the first place, as a rule his services are not engaged until the drought has prevailed so long that its termination in the near future has become highly probable. In the second place by keeping watch of local indications, and also, perhaps, by taking a sly look at the official weather map, the rain-maker often can time his operations so that they will coincide with changes in atmospheric conditions upon which the occurrence of rain depends.

By virtue of his one sided contract, the rain-maker has everything to gain and nothing to lost. The business is about the safest gamble going, and several American citizens have amassed considerable fortunes and have acquired wide celebrity by pretending to conjure water out of the clouds.

Some years ago the owner of a big California farm offered to pay $2000 for two inches of rain in three days, provide the rain maker would put up $200 to be forfeited in case of failure. The offer was declined, though the conditions at the time were not unfavorable for rain, and showers to the extent of four inches actually fell within the next 48 hours.

AUTOMOBILES WITHOUT WHEELS

A REVOLUTIONARY development in automobile construction, just perfected by General Tire and Rubber Company engineers, provides for huge, soft tires, parabolic in shape, which are attached directly to the hubs of the car, wheels being eliminated.

After two and a half years of research, testing and development, General has just announced its Streamline Jumbo tire, larger at the base than at the tread and safer and easier riding than present-day balloon tires.

With two and one-half times as much air capacity as present-day balloon tires of the same size, the Streamline Jumbo tire literally gives to motorists the sensation of floating through the air.

Air pressure of from 10 to 14 pounds is recommended for these tires, as compared to pressure of from 25 to 40 pounds required for ordinary balloon tires.

Tire engineers have pointed out that the Streamline Jumbo is the first advance over the ordinary "Doughnut" type of balloon tire, which is wider at the middle than at the base or tread, causing a decrease in power when used at low air pressures.

Several reports of city finances and cost of current expenses for the year were presented to the council after an investigation by Eathan A. Brewster, an alderman. This aided the council in setting the record.

Disbursements for the month totaled $66,269.56, while receipts amounted to $35,499.33. Of the receipts there was $31,130.14 by the electrical department, $2,119.45 paid by the state for aid for deaf children, and various amounts for tuition. The rest came from interest on bonds, fines, and Class A permits to operate soft drink parlors.

Money in the contingent fund was reduced from $61,929.73 on Nov. 1 to $57,295.42 on Dec. 1. This is a reduction of approximately $4,200. Receipts for the month totaled $217.97, while disbursements amounted to $4,852.28.

There were no receipts in the north road fund, while disbursements amount to $747.55, leaving a balance of $10,054.02. In the south road district fund there were no receipts and $1,530.23 was spent, leaving an overdraft of $66,042.34.

Both north and south sewer district funds are overdrawn. There were disbursements of $42.75 in the north sewer fund, increasing the overdraft to $2,921.44, while $97.65 was spent in the south sewer fund, increasing the overdraft to $13,091.79.

Receipts in the electrical department fund were slightly more than disbursements There were receipts of $31,130.14, while disbursements amounted to $30,820.27, leaving a balance of $49,524.91.

City schoo's funds were decreased approximately $6,000, as $8,227.25 was used and receipts of $2,416.18 was recorded. The vocational fund was also reduced from $1,636.42 to $284.57. Receipts amounted to $88.87, while $1,440.72 was used from the fund.

W. P. Cole

He was ill then for months, was not sworn in until March, 1928, and in November of that year was defeated by Linwood L. Clark, republican.

In winning his house seat Cole staged a "comeback" to defeat Clark with the result that the Maryland delegation of six in the House of representative is solidly democratic. He is 42 years old.

In the World War Cole participated in all the engagements of the 79th Division in France as a lieutenant and was made a captain after the armistice. He has been active in American Legion affairs.

The new representative comes of a political family, his father, four times clerk of the Baltimore county circuit court, having been active in Democratic politics. Law is his profession.

MANY CONVENTIONS IN NEW YORK CITY

Automobile Show Tops List —Expect About 250,000 Visitors

New York— (CPA)— The New York Automobile show tops the long list of conventions which will bring approximately 250,000 visitors to New York during January. The motor show itself will attract about 75,000 in the week beginning Jan. 9.

New York City will benefit by more than $20,000,000 at the expense of the January visitors, according to John R. Young, manager of the Convention Bureau of the Merchants Association. A large part of this sum goes to the retail stores and the remainder is spent in hotels, restaurants, theaters and taxicabs.

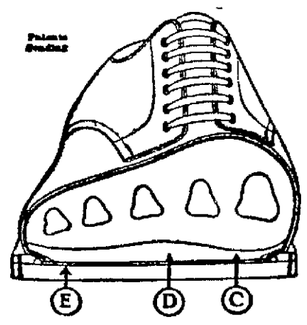

January is the biggest month for conventions, Mr. Young pointed out Manufacturers, whether they make speed boats or plumbago crucibles, favor the beginning of the year for their annual get-together.

Among the organizations meeting here this month are the United States Polo association, United States Golf association, Rubber Trades of America, National Auto-Manufacturers association, Cycle mobile Chamber of Commerce, National Electrical Manufacturers Association, Automotive Electric association, National Association of Hosiery and underwear Manufacturers, Mining and Metallurgical Society of America, National Sugar Brokers Association, Surety Association of America, Society of Automotive Engineers, Tea Association of the U. "Wear Straight" a New Word in Shoe Service

Ever since man started wearing shoes with a thick sole, he has been having trouble by wearing those soles thin to one side. He generally puts the blame on his style of walking, but within the last few years there has been developed a shoe that wears the soles straight across the bottom, proving that the trouble was in the shoes and not in the style of walking.

This new development is the Musebeck Double-Arch Wear-Straight Shoe. It is doubtful if the term "Wear-Straight" has ever before been applied to a shoe's trade mark. The Musebeck Shoe does just what the name implies — it wears straight across the outer sole because its arch support construction gives the foot an evenly balanced tread.

THE SUPPORT OF THE METATARSAL ARCH IN THE MUSEBECK DOUBLE-ARCH WEAR-STRAIGHT SHOE — (C) Musebeck Wear-Straight Insole, shaped to give perfect foot balance. Result: outsoles wear straight across the bottom instead of wearing thin to wedged shape at outside ball. (D) Thick mellow insole, shaped to metatarsal arch. A permanent solid leather arch that fits the normal foot and does not collapse. (E) Imported hair felt, chemically treated. An insulation against dampness, cold or heat.

SUSPEND LICENSES OF TWO SHIPPERS

Madison—(AP)—The state department of agriculture and markets has announced suspension of the licenses of two Wisconsin potato shippers in an effort to stop misbranding and misgrading of potatoes.

Those suspended are R. L. Peterson, Amherst, whose license was revoked until July 1, and Larson Brothers, Grantsburg, who lost license privileges for 30 days.

Peterson was charged with shipping potatoes in sacks of a competitor carrying a label graded higher than the product he was shipping the department said. The law requires the sacks to bear the true name and address of the shipper.

Larson Brothers misgraded their shipments, the department said.

WHEN

Hard Times

COME A-KNOCKING AT THE DOOR

Whether or not, as some people think, times are harder today than they ever have been, we are sure of one thing:

There have been ten business depressions since A & P was founded in 1859; and, with the rest of the country, A & P has come through all ten of them stronger and better. We believe we can do it again.

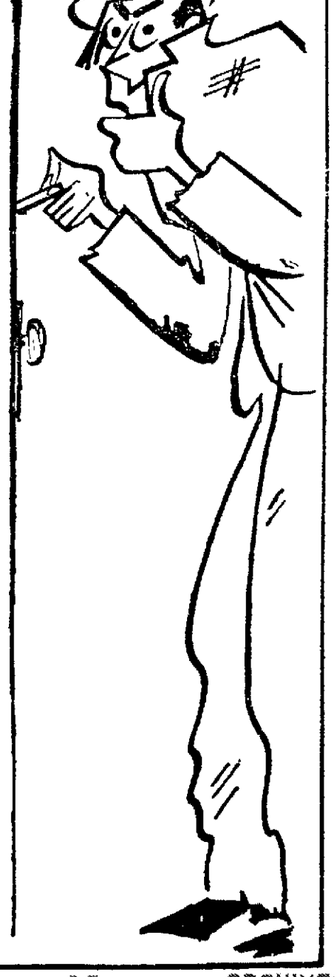

Our part, as we see it, is to keep on selling more food for less money—thus making it possible for more people to buy more food—in turn, keeping more food producers busy, and making more jobs all around.

And it works. For today, besides furnishing a steady market for many growers and producers, we are employing 5,763 more workers in our own company than we did in 1929, the most prosperous year this country has known.

Chapter 26

"YOU MEAN MARRIAGE"

COWBOY, I shore hope you won't rile Ash — leastways hyar before the women," said Preston, hurriedly.

"Don't worry, boss, returned Rock with a genial laugh. He had caught a glimpse of Thiry, who kept somewhat in the background.

Egypt was standing, bridle down, halfway between Ash and the porch. One glance told Rock that he was gaunt, dirty and rough, but apparently as sound as ever. He whinnied at sight of Rock.

"Howdy boys!" said Rock, nodding to the drivers on the wagons. Then halting beside Egypt, he turned to face Ash Preston. Despite his iron control a slight quiver stung his frame. How cool, intent, potential of evil menace this man! He stood at ease, hands on his hips, his black sombrero slouched back, his blue-flame eyes piercing Rock, as if to read his mind Rock had met penetrating glances before, and this one shot little cold sparks along his marrow.

"Howdy, Ash! Did you like my horse?" he said, with perfect composure and entire absence of rancor.

Not improbably that was the last query Ash Preston would ever have anticipated.

"Best hoss I ever forked," he replied, without feeling of any kind.

"Thanks. Hope you were good to him."

"Wal, Rock, the fact is I begun bad," drawled Ash. "But he piled me in the brush. An' runnin' him over rough ground didn't phase him none. An' I reckon I ended treatin' him good."

"Did he pitch with you?" queried Rock, in genuine surprise

"He's got any outlaw beat I ever rode."

"Dog-gone! — Leslie swore this horse never pitched in his life."

"Reckon that was no lie, Rock But I nagged him. He threw me, an' I couldn't get near him again thet day."

"Served you right," responded Rock, naturally. "It doesn't pay to be mean to horses And see here, Ash, don't go borrowin' a horse from a rider without askin' him."

The tension relaxed, the charged atmosphere lost its fullness and suspense. Gage Preston laughed loud, as if explosion was relief. The women began to mumur. And Ash, though he betrayed little of what might have been his true state, eyed Rock with slow, cool smile, and slouched with clinking steps to the porch.

Thiry met him, reached for him in glad excitement: "Oh Ash, I'm glad you're back—and you—and everything all right."

Ash wrapped his long arms around her, and hugging her closely, he bent his head over her. The action seemed eloquent, beautiful, and yet it carried a hint of bold raw nature. It pierced Rock like fire. Bending down to feel the legs of his horse, he kept that studious posture until he had recovered. Without a glance backward then, he led Egypt down toward the barns. And he brooded in mind, muttering his thoughts.

"Cold, shiny rattlesnake ready to strike—Sol Winter sure had him figured. . . . I just wonder. Reckon he thought I'd rave and curse. Sure he'd have come back at me. . . . And then a fist fight or gun-play!—Damm him, he wanted it. . . . Now what in h——— can you do with a fellow like that?"

But Rock's heat and rancor lost itself in something worse—jealousy It had seared him to see Thiry run to Ash, almost with arms outstretched, her face flushed, her eyes alight, her voice broken, to receive that strange caress. Yet was it a caress? What violence of emotion attacked Rock! He could not trust himself on the moment. He only knew he had fallen into sudden misery and must extricate himself.

Rock spent so much time caring for Egypt, cleaning and brushing him, and making him a comfortable bed of grass in a stall, that it was dark when he got back to his cabin The supper bell rang. He had no appetite, and at this moment he strongly resented the need to keep on with the role he had assumed for Thiry Preston's sake. What use! He could not carry it on forever. Tomorrow, or next week, or month Ash Preston would go beyond the pale—beyond any man's endurance

"Aw, I'm sore," growled Rock, and swore at himself He had planned to overlook and overcome Ash's appropriating his horse so affrontingly. But that was nothing compared to seeming Thiry in her brother's arms. He had not calculated upon such a contingency. Still, Ash was only her brother; it was only a blood tie. Nevertheless, it rankled. He could not explain his reaction to this perfectly normal attachment between brother and sister. So he put it down to the account of his own defects.

It occurred to Rock, presently, that to live up to his apparently amenable attitude he must present himself at the supper table. To this end he hurried out, and fought himself all the way over, to present an agreeable front. Fortunately he did not arrive late, as the Prestons were just seating themselves at table, all of them more or less gay.

For the first time in five days Rock looked deliberately into Thiry's face. She gave him a grateful smile, wistful and wondering, as if she would make amends for doubt. If softened Rock, and though he did not glance at her again, he managed to get through the meal cheerfully. Afterward, to his relief, Preston called him into his cabin. It had two rooms, conected by a curtained alcove.

"Have a drink with me, Rock," invited Preston. He was in high spirits.

"Sorry, boss, but that oughtn't "Thet's so. I forget. Lord save me from influencin' any man to break his word. Have a cigar, then I shore recommend these."

"Thanks," replied Rock, accepting one. "Did you have a successful trip?"

"Best ever, but thet won't interest you," returned Preston, briefly "I'll say, though, thet when the trip ended hyar I was some worried An' when I seen you packin' a gun, I was scared stiff."

"Sory, boss, but that oughtn't have bothered you. It's just habit"

"Ahuh!" returned Preston, giving Rock a dubious look "But it was hard to figger you. Ash shore wasn't able to. An' you clean knocked the pins from under him. He didn't, an' neither did any of us, expect you to take thet dirty deal so nice an friendly."

"What else could I do?" demanded Rock, spreading wide his hands "I came out here to make friends, not enemies."

"Wal, I'm shore thankin' you When we rode off last week I was shore mad at Ash. But I got over it an' now I'm hopin' it won't be as bad as I feared. You've got Ash stumped. I heard him ask Lucy if you'd been runnin after Thiry."

"Humph! What did Lucy say?"

"Lucy said you hadn't—thet you were seldom hyar, an' then never paid no attention to Thiry. Is thet so, Rock?"

"Reckon it is, since you left"

"You an' Thiry quarreled, I take it," went on Preston "She didn't say so, but she has a way of makin the boys leave her alone. I didn't think you'd be so easy, an' I'll gamble it won't last Just before supper Thiry told me you'd acted wonderful with Ash—thet she'd misjudged you. Don't remember when I've seen the lass so strange The truth is, Rock, I think she likes you an' hates the falseness of the situation. You've shore begun right if you're in earnest about her"

Rock could scarcely believe his ears Yet there was no mistaking Preston He implied even more than he said.

"In earnest? Good Lord! I wish I knew how to tell you how earnest I am."

"Wal, I reckon now I savvy why you met Ash that way. Guess I had the hunch. Rock, you're an upstanin' fine chap an' I like you Thet bad habit you used to have don't hurt you in my estimation. So don't be backward tellin' me just how you feel about Thiry"

"Preston the minute I laid eyes on Thiry I felt in love with her," replied Rock, with sincere depth and frankness "It's changed my whole life"

"Thanks fer talkin' out," rejoined Preston, puffing at his cigar and bending deep inscrutable eyes upon Rock "Course you mean marriage, cowboy?"

PARTY CHIEFS IN ACCORD ON FINANCE BILL

Compromise Reached on Proposed Federal Reconstruction Program

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright, 1932 by Post Pub. Co.

Washington—A compromise has been reached between Republicans and Democrats in the wording of the bill creating the reconstruction finance corporation, so that the proposed issue of $1,500,000,000 of debentures will become an attractive investment without being a direct issue of the treasury.

An unusual device has been provided whereby Uncle Sam will constantly support the market made by these debentures so that at all times they will be maintained at approximately the same price and yield at which they will have been issued.

This situation develops out of an effort to reconcile the views of Senators Glass of Virginia and Bulkley of Ohio, Democrats, and the Republican sponsors of the measure, Senator Walcott of Connecticut, who represented the administration.

Mr. Glass, author of the federal reserve act, did not think the debentures should be eligible for collateral when member banks borrowed from the federal reserve. Mr. Bulkley thought the debentures might as well be government bonds and thus automatically eligible for rediscount.

The defenders of the debenture idea insisted that these could be issued on such an attractive basis, since they would be tax exempt, that they would compare favorably with any collateral now used in rediscounting at the federal reserve banks.

Debentures Questions

It was argued that since the debentures were guaranteed as to ultimate payment by the treasury itself they should not be permitted to take a lesser position in the security market, which might happen if the rediscount privilege were omitted. To harmonize the various views the idea was suggested that the treasury itself be permitted to sell bonds to whatever amount needed to support the market for the debentures. It is estimated that probably at no time will more than fifty or sixty million dollars be necessary to support the market for the new debentures. As a matter of fact in the early post-war period the war finance corporation after which the reconstruction finance corporation is patterned made a handsome return to the treasury by being permitted to buy in government bonds that sagged as the news of the world caused all securities to fluctuate.

The effect of the mere existence of treasury support of the debenture market will be to hold the debentures at high levels and probably will make unnecessary any buying by the treasury of the reconstruction finance corporation debentures.

Ample Security

As a matter of fact, the reconstruction finance debentures will in some respects be as potent a security as can be issued for they will have behind them two things—the assets of the institution which borrows from that corporation and the assets of the United States. If the reconstruction finance corporation found it necessary to sell any of the assets placed as collateral with it, the proceeds thereof would probably bring a high proportion of the amount and then the United States government would really only have to make up the difference. In many instances the collateral given by the private borrowers will have to be in value 20 per cent above the sums borrowed from the reconstruction finance corporation.

This large margin of safety is expected to enable the corporation to use the proceeds of the $1,500,000,000 of debentures and the capital sum of $500,000,000 in government bonds or certificates, namely a total of two billion dollars, to support a credit structure of at least ten times that amount. It is from the revolving credit idea and the multiplicity of credit that the hopes of the bankers and business men in the ultimate usefulness of the proposed corporation are derived.

With the ironing out of differences in the senate, it now is believed the bill will go through the senate quickly and that the house may get through with it during the present week, in which case the corporation might be set up for operation by Jan. 15.

BANKING BILL APPROVED BY STATE SENATE

Assures Reorganization of Department — Textbook Resolution Wins O. K.

Madison—(AP)— A reorganization of the state banking department providing for a review board of five members to advise the banking commissioner and allowing an increase in the latter's salary from $5,000 to $7,500 was assured today.

The Grobschmidt bill which makes the changes has been amended and passed by both houses of the legislature and now goes to the governor, who is expected to approve it.

The senate, by a vote of 23 to 7, receded yesterday from its position on an amendment by Senator George Blanchard of Edgerton, which stipulated that trust companies would be eligible to receive public deposits. The assembly had refused to concur in the amendment. The measure otherwise has the approval of both branches.

The five members of the banking review board will be appointed by the governor. This board will act in an advisory capacity to consider problems submitted by the commissioner to effect consolidations of banks.

The measure originally increased the commissioner's salary to $9,000 and allowed a proportionate increase for his deputy but this was cut by amendment in the assembly to $6,000.

The senate then increased the figure to $7,500 by permitting the emergency board to release that much for the commissioner's salary.

By a vote of 29 to 1 the state senate adopted the joint resolution by Senator John Cashman of Denmark; asking the state superintendent of education to eliminate school textbooks which the senator claims contain inaccurate and unfair charges against Germany with respect to the World war. The resolution was messaged to the assembly.

Cashman contended that history books now used in the schools, slander the German people, contain war time propaganda, perpetuate war hatreds and subject the Wisconsin residents of German descent who had nothing to do with the war to ridicule.

Senator Ben Gettelman of Milwaukee, urged the adoption of the resolution. He said that a similar measure was approved by a heavy senate majority in the regular session but was killed in the assembly by the Progressives.

Catarrh Causes Head Noises and Deafness

This Method Opens Clogged Nostrils and Relieves Catarrhal Deafness

Few people realize what a serious disease catarrh really is. Deafness and head noises that drive the sufferer nearly frantic are frequently due to this complaint. Unchecked, this disgusting, dangerous ailment, often destroys smell, taste and hearing, slowly undermines the general health. Its neglect may make you a wornout catarrhal wreck.

As catarrh is a disease of the blood, the only real relief comes from treating the blood itself. So go to Schlintz Bros or your druggist for an ounce of Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it ¾ pint of hot water and a little sugar. Take a tablespoonful four times a day. Drive the catarrhal poisons from the system by treating the blood, and the disease itself must vanish. Parmint has proved successful in so many cases because it acts directly on the blood and mucous membrane.

Life will be much more worth living if you can breathe freely again, hear plainly, smell, taste, and arise in the morning refreshed and strong, with head and throat free from phlegm. For your own sake give Parmint a trial — and with your whole system crying for relief from catarrh you should start Parmint treatment now. Adv.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Beware a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

RELIEF BOND ISSUE UNDER CROSS-FIRE

Senator LaFollette's Bill Proposes $5,500,000,000 Expenditure

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington — The one impressive proposal for taking a powerful smash at the depression is this proposal for a public construction bond issue of billions of dollars. The sum of money involved is enormous, but the plan's possibilities for economic revival as seen by its supporters are even more so.

Several members of Congress have been urging such a measure as a means of unemployment relief and business revival, proposing bond issues of from two to five billions. Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin tops them all with a bill which would raise $5,500,000,000.

Weather the idea is constructive and really bears great promise as an unprecedented recipe for breaking up a terrible slump or whether it is dangerous and likely to do more harm than good is already the subject of an argument which probably will attract a great deal of attention as it continues.

Five billions is so much money that in peacetime it could be devoted only to public projects which would represent a definite gain after the depression had passed. It would only be raised in time of actual emergency and those who want the bond issue compare their plan with the Liberty loan drives and this period with that time of emergency when about $25,000,000,000 was raised for purposes of war.

* * *

The present program for strengthening the nation's credit resources is recognized as one designed to prop up existing business—to prevent the effects of depression from becoming increasingly serious. But it is claimed that the bond issue would soon put millions of persons at work and stimulate all lines of business as well as definitely ameliorate a situation threatening the solvency of banks, insurance companies, railroads and other corporations. LaFollette says it would boost commodity and security prices, something essential to any quick recovery.

"Best estimates indicate that expenditure of $5,500,000,000 for construction would give jobs to 1,500,000 of the unemployed directly and at least twice that many indirectly in industries supplying the materials and producing consumers' goods for those whose purchasing power would be restored" the senator says. "Commodity prices would be stimulated both by the immediate demand for finished and semi-finished products and by a changed consumer psychology which would cause a resumption of buying. Basic industries, now suffering severely, would be affected by the demand for iron and steel, lumber, cement, brick, tile, glass, electrical equipment plumbing supplies and other material. Mines, quarries and forests would increase production. Much railroad traffic would be restored."

* * *

Further, if half the money went into wages, more shoes, clothing, food, automobiles, radios furniture and similar things would be sold. Farmers presumably would benefit through increased demand for their products and better prices.

LaFollette's bill proposed to issue bonds or $50 denomination and up the issue to be floated by popular subscription much as the Liberty loan issues were floated. The bonds would mature in 10 years and be retired by a fund raised through an additional surtax which LaFollette suggests as 2 per cent on net income of all persons above the $5000 income group with exemptions of $2500 from taxable income for married persons receiving under $10,000 and of $1000 for unmarried persons.

Under a newly created administrator of public works, about $650,000,000 would be spent to expand federal construction—river and harbor and flood control work, public buildings, forest roads, irrigation and relamation; $1,000,000,000 on additional grants to aid state public works construction — expanded federal-aid highway work, highway bridges, grade crossing elimination, and $3,750,000 made available for loans to state and local authorities—who usually carry on 90 per cent of public construction. Unable to enlarge existing programs and sometimes forced to curtail them, these authorities have trouble floating bond issues now because of adverse credit conditions. The loans would be made available at no more than 5 per cent interest for highways, streets, bridges, water and sewerage works, flying fields, establishment of parks and playgrounds, school's and other public works, grade crossing elimination, fire prevention lanes and other forestry construction. Another $100,000,000 would be loaned to limited dividend corporations formed to construct low-priced housing.

WORLD TAKING ON ROSY TINT FOR WALL-ST

Security Price Recovery Holds Throughout Second Trading Session

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Editor

New York —(AP)— Wall-st took a squint or two through its rose tinted spectacles today, as the recovery in security prices persisted through the second successive trading session.

While yesterday's upturn had been viewed as primarily a technical rebound, and had been regarded with considerable skepticism in some quarters, a markedly better feeling was manifest in prominent financial circles today.

After a little early hesitation, the share market pushed upward under the leadership of the rails. Advances of 2 to 5 points were registered in such issues as Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, New York Central, New Haven, Northern Pacific, Atlantic coast line and Baltimore and Ohio. Elsewhere in the list, similar gains appeared in such issues as U. S. Steel, American Can, Eastman, American Tobacco B, Liggett and Myers B, Case, Coca Co'a and others.

While railroad leaders point out that real improvement in revenues must await a revival of general business activity, it was stated in important banking quarters that possible railroad financial crisis which had caused considerable worry, now seemed definitely averted. With the Railroad Credit Corp. already set up the Reconstruction Finance Corp. expected to be shortly authorized, and the prospect of a general wage reduction, it was felt that the position of the carriers was being impressively bolstered.

While Wall-st feels that further dividend paring is in store, some of its worries on that score were quieted by the remarks of Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, in an address in Boston. Sloan felt that the rights of the stockholders justified the drawing upon large surpluses for the maintenance of dividends in lean times.

Sloan's expression of opinion that prices might be stabilized by the broadening of the credit base, "without in any sense departing from present monetary standards," aroused considerable interest. It was pointed out that the Reconstruction Finance corporation is one agency which might such credit expansion.

Further private banking advices from abroad tended to bear out yesterday's reports of progress toward a Franco-British understanding on German credits and reparations, although in one important banking quarter, it was said that tentative agreements thus far appeared to be merely "in principle," and that final solution might require considerable time and patience.

PRICES CONTINUE RISE ON BOND MART

Profit Taking, However, Tends to Retard Gains in Some Issues

New York —(AP)—Bonds generally continued their advance today although profit taking tended to retard some issues from increasing their gains immoderately.

The United States government list which during the past few days has been going contrary to the corporate securities traded, was inclined to recover some of its recent losses. Liberty bonds were easy, but most of the treasuring St. Paul, Erie, Missouri Pacific recorded gains.

In the utilities American Telephone, International Telephone and Postal Telegraph loans were favored. Industries such as Armour and So. 4½s, Shell Union Oil 5s and International Match 5s extended their gains.

ACTIVITIES RISE ON LIVESTOCK MART

Prices Carried Back Toward Last Week's Highest Figures

Chicago —(AP)— Another spurt of activity in the hog market, carried prices near last week's best figures. Several causes combined to give the market a rosier aspect, but in view of the falling off of demand for pork in the local wholesale market, sellers were not unduly elated. Broad eastern demand has increased shipping orders for butchers weighing under 250 lbs. Storm conditions in some of the western markets diverting orders to this market. Early trading was 10-15c higher than Wednesday's average, and many good loads were held at $4.60; though $4.50 stopped the good 180 to 190 lbs. at the outset.

An important factor in the swine trade is the reduction of packers' direct receipts here. So far this year they have received 51,000 against 7-,000 during the same period in 1931. This has drawn packers into the market for the major portion of their killing material. Today's direct billings totaled 8,000 head.

Cattle trade at the opening today did not have the go that characterizes the late market on the previous day. Limited receipts of desirable steers kept down the buying forces, but generally steady prices were quotable.

Offerings of 30,000 sheep included no direct consignments to packers and afforded sufficient fat stock to check the price upturn.

WHEAT PRICES REPORTED BEST IN MANY WEEKS

Export Purchases, Strengthened Securities Bring Increases

BY JOHN P. BOUGHAN
Associated Press Market Eidtor

Chicago —(AP)— Best prices on wheat since a week before Christmas were reached today in connection with strength of Wall-st securities and with further export purchases.

Cables said European continental countries were buying wheat on a liberal scale. A leading Australian exporter was asserted to have sold 2,500,000 bushels of wheat to China.

Supplies of Russian wheat in Great Britain were reported today as rapidly diminishing, and Black Sea shipmets were smaller, indicating that wintry conditions were curtailing the movement of grain. Forecasts of Argentine wheat exports were also devoid of indications of any important increase. Furthermore, domestic receipts of wheat at primary centers continued to shrink, totaling but 275,000 bushels, against 467,000 a year ago, and Omaha reported that out of 58 cars arriving there today 40 were from other terminals.

In various quarters, significance was placed on assertions that the United States farm board had booker at least a little vessel room to Antwerp, presumably for the export of wheat from this country. A moderate amount of overnight export business in North American wheat from the Pacific coast was noted. Meanwhile, Winnipeg advised that Canadian rural holders of wheat were selling little or nothing. Corn and oats displayed relative firmness owing largely to wheat price upturns.

Provisions were steadied by a rise in hog values.

PRICES FIRMER ON N. Y. CURB MARKET

Trading Quiet—Buyers Not to Be Tempted Until Gains Are Tested

New York —(AP)— The curb market displayed cautious firmness today. Small advances from the previous clase were well distributed, but trading was quiet and it seemed that buyers were not to be tempted until the latest advance had undergone a testing.

The opening was steady and dull. Profit-taking filtered in during the morning, but offerings were readily taken and most leaders worked slowly to new highs for the recovery, although net gains in most instances were modest. Electric Bond and Share held close to Wednesday's final quotation for the first two or three hours.

Standard Oil of Indiana sold well above 15 and turned over actively. Cities Service crossed 6 to the best price in several weeks and Gulf bettered its recent levels. Humble was quiet.

Aluminum of America continued its advance and was again traded in fairly large volume. The company recently announced that its fixed charges were being covered three times, although market circles hear that last year's results will show nothing for the common against $1.93 a share in 1930. It is believed that approximately $2.60 a share was earned on the 6 per cent preferred in the year just ended.

Despite the aproach of the annual show, automobile stocks were dull. In the specialties, Insurance Company of North America, which has been having a thin market, improved. There was litle demand for Dere, Pennroad stiffened in response to the gains in railroad stocks. Swift International rallied.

HOAN EXPLAINS POLICIES FOR CITY FINANCE

Milwaukee Mayor Tells Why His City Enters New Year Free of Debts

BY MAYOR DANIEL W. HOAN OF MILWAUKEE

What is wrong with the finances of American municipalities, many states and the federal government?

They are choking themselves to death with the borrowing habit. If this borrowing habit is curtailed gradually until money is borrowed only for the most essential purposes and for projects that outlive the time for which bonds are issued, cities can gradually save the interest waste and use these moneys for beneficial projects and better service.

Every day letters come to me from city officials asking: "How does Milwaukee manage to run a large industrial metropolis with a tax rate below the average of American cities, with million dollar balances in the bank, with an amortization fund, already exceeding $3,000,000, which is designed ultimately to wipe out the city's bonded debt, with most of the departments operating on a cash basis?"

The answer is Milwaukee's financial program, extending over 20 years. What Milwaukee has done can be done by every large city—if it has the will to do so.

I do not believe that what has been accomplished in Milwaukee will be carried out in other cities without the leadership or driving force of a well-organized party of workers as illustrated in the Socialist Party in Milwauke. Such an organization demands efficient government, freedom from graft, an honest financial program.

* * *

Funds All Depleted

Before 1910, Milwaukee indulged in all of the practices characteristic of municipal efficiency. The tax rate had been kept low, but every fund in the city was depleted. The Fire and Police Pension Fund was bankrupt to the tune of $2,000,000; there were insufficient funds in the budget to operate the city; there was a shortage of nine schoolhouses; bridges and streets were in disrepair; no playgrounds for the children—in brief, much the same conditions that now face every other large city.

The first step was to check the borrowing habit. The first Socialist administration in 1910 discontinued issuing bonds for the city's share of street improvements.

The second step was to stop issuing bonds for annually recurring expenses. Instead, the city levied a cash tax.

* * *

Budget Established

A scientific budget system was established to prevent waste of tax moneys. Under this plan the city officals must estimate the amounts needed to operate their departments. The Board of Estimates compares the thousands of items with theamunts spent the previous year, reduces these estimates, and adopts the budget. Thereupon a tax rate is fixed. Every department is held within its estimate. Now, instead of an annual deficit there is an annual surplus.

A central purchasing board systematizes all city buying and saves 10 per cent thereby.

We have been placing one department after another on a cash basis until today over there-fourths of our city work is on this basis, and within three years all our departments will be so financed. As a result we are able to pay cash for our materials and to our contractors and many thousands of dollars annually are saved in interest and discounts alone.

Amortization Fund

All cities are staggering under the load of their bonded debt. Milwaukee worked out an amortization fund which will, within 30 years, be sufficently large to pay off all our public debt, thus reducing the tax rate $8 per thousand.

How was this fund established? It is the habit of cities to deposit tax moneys in banks which pay two per cent or less. A Milwaukee Socialist alderman proposed that the city invest these moneys in United States or good municipal bonds drawing three to five per cent. The city's interest funds increased enormously. After these sums accumulated, a state law was passed providing that half the fund be placed for an amortization. The fund thus increased annually and is now $3,000,000.

* * *

Despite its ambitious financial program, Milwaukee's tax rate has never been above the average of that of all American cities, or even the average of the larger cities.

Milwaukee's tax rate for all purposes, including school tax, is $26 per thousand of assessed valuation, with assessments made on the basis of appraising property at approximately 74 per cent of its market value.

Our tax rate is beginning to drop below the average and I predict that before long other cities, still pursuing old methods, will be confronted with ever increasing tax rates while, I believe, the Milwaukee limit has been reached.

MILWAUKEE'S RULES FOR CITY FINANCE

1. Don't issue bonds for projects that won't outlive the time for which the bonds are issued; levy a cash tax and save the bond interest.
2. Put city departments on a cash basis; three-fourths of Milwaukee already are.
3. Buy for cash—and save 10 er cent thereby.
4. Instead of depositing current city tax moneys in banks at two per cent, buy Liberty or other bonds paying from three to five per cent.
5. Use half of such proceeds for an amortization fund to retire the city's bonded debt — which Milwaukee plans to do in 30 years.

CULBERTSON on CONTRACT

"PSYCHING" TO LOSE

Mr. Oswald Jacoby, who is Mr. Sidney S. Lenz's partner in the Battle of 1001 Bridge Hands, is probably the leading Apostle of psychic bidding in the City of New York, if not in the United States. In fact, so much does he love this type of bidding that he can scarcely be said to belong to that class who "Can take their psychics or let them alone." Psychic bids with him are interesting, regardless of the result. Here is a hand played in the match, in which Mr. Jacoby made a Third Hand Opening Psychic bid and eventually found himself playing the hand at a game contract with the result that he was defeated 2 tricks. Were it not for the the psychic Opening bid, the hand would have been passed out.

North—Dealer.

1—The ruling and irrepressible passion.
2—Rather strong bidding by Mr. Lenz, but Mr. Jacoby's psychic tactics were quite mystifying.
3—Anxious to apply the brakes.
4—Again strong bidding. However, the justification is that East and West could have made three spades, losing two hearts, one spade and one diamond. The bidding, therefore, is justified as a safety measure, once the Opening psychic bid was made.

In the play, Mr. Jacoby was defeated 2 tricks undoubled for a penalty loss of 100 points. It is, of course, self-evident that if he had passed, the hand must be passed out.

TODAY'S POINTER

Many so-called "psychic" bids are losing bids, because, if honestly made, partner is as much misled by them as opponents.

"CRAZY QUILT" IS BIG HIT ON STAGE

Billy Rose's Production Hits Middlewest After Run in New York

BY WARD MOREHOUSE

New York, —(CPA)— Billy Rose is trying the circus ballyhoo with his "Crazy Quilt" in the middle west, billing it as an incomparable extravaganza, as the most thrilling and stupendous spectacle since the beginning of time. And the gentlefolk are clamoring for admission. In New York "crazy quilt" was only so-so; on tour it's something of a riot.

The town of Fort Wayne, Ind., hasn't had a theater open for touring attractions since "The Man of the Hour" went through, but that didn't stop "Crazy Quilt." The canny Mr. Rose booked it into the shrine auditorium for a one-night stand and the evening's receipts totaling $4,448, meant that people were standing on each other's toes.

Billy Rose breathlessly wires that it was the auditorium's first sell-out since 1924, that there's nothing the matter with the road if you give them what they want, and that if his landslide business continues he'll come back to New York, buy a theatre if anybody is willing to sell and name it for himself.

"Crying Out Loud"—that's the title of the Irving Berlin-Moss Hart musical piece which Sam H. Harris will put into the New Amsterdam in February. Hassard Short is in general charge, with George S. Kaufman directing the book and Albertina Rasch the dances. Albert Johnson is designing the settings.

Players engaged for "Wild Waves" include Osgood Perkins, Betty Starbuck, Edith Van Cleve and Bruce MacFarlane. It opens at the Garrick, Philadelphia, Jan. 18. The Aarons and Freedley Production of "Adam Had Two Sons" opens at the Garrick, Philadelphia, next Monday.

Elmer Rice is to put out a new company in "Counsellor-At-Law," his hit at the Plymouth, and it will open in Chicago in February.

Your Birthday

WHAT TOMORROW MEANS TO YOU

By MARY BLAKE
"CAPRICORN"

If January 8th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:40 a. m. to 9 a. m., from 2:30 p. m. to 3:34 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. to midnight. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. and from 7:30 p. m. to 9 p. m.

January 8th favors those who are past middle-age, their business affairs will improve, or family difficulties will be unexpectedly settled. Speculative investments, especially in minerals or metals, would not be advisable at this time. The young may form tempting, but profitless, friendships.

The child born on this January 8th will have a certain perseverance and determination which will carry through most of the things it undertakes successfully. It will be subject to moods, rather quick of temper, and critical. It will not be dependent upon others, nor crave companionship.

You, if a woman, and born January 8th, are not of a philosophical, contented nature. You will never reach that point in life when you are not crying for something beyond. You are very full of the love of things, and are a worshipper of false gods. You are always seeking outside stimulation, and have nothing to fall back upon but the excitements that take the place of imagination. You are sophisticated, supercritical, intolerant, and pretend to despise anything of a "highbrow" nature. You are fundamentally sound, but you do not seem able to find yourself. You do not find anything interesting enough to call for any real effort or thought.

You, if a man, and born January 8th, have a roving disposition. As you see the world, it is sadly out of joint. You have an exaggerated idea of your own consequence, and are too self-centered to properly connect with life. You have your share of brains, and are really clever, but ideas are not properly indexed for commercial value. You do not have the personality to put things across. You are willing to work, and to work hard, but you lack the patience to stick to anything for long at a time. Your moral integrity is of the highest, and your actions are always clean-cut and above board. You will love with intensity.

Successful People Born January 8th:

1—John Canfield Spencer—statesman.
2—Lowell Mason—musician.
3—Wilkis Collins—English novelist.
4—James Longstreet—engineer and soldier.
5—William W. Gilchrist—composer.

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough due to a cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It is also absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. At the same time, it promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in those severe coughs which follow cold epidemics.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest medicinal agents for severe coughs and bronchial irritations.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.
